EARLY BIRDS crowd round the pumps to be sure of getting gas when the service station opens in Oak Bluffs, on Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Last week, the nine stations on the island were forced to close early because of panic buying by residents and tourists, coupled with quotas imposed by the oil companies which limit the quantities of fuel service stations receive for sale to customers.

Air Wildcats Hit Four Cities

Times News Services

Air Canada machinists hit four airports today with wildcat walkouts to protest their union's tentative contract agreement with the airline reached Tuesday.

Ramp crews walked off the job at Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Halifax and a spokesman for the International Association of machinist and Aerospace Workers said the spontaneous strikes could spread to other areas.

Air Canada reported by midday that the 100 Vancouver workers were returning to work—the 200 day shift employees at Montreal had ended their 45-minute walkout earlier — just as 45 to 50 Halifax workers walked off their jobs.

An airline spokesman said at Toronto, where about 300 workers remained on strike, short-haul traffic was "extremely sporadic" and the airline was appealing to short-distance travellers to "consider other forms of transportation."

He said the "strike" already forced cancellation of 14 departures from Toronto and one inbound flight to Montreal, and more cuts "were highly likely."

"The walkouts — definitely not authorized by the union, could be, in part, in protest against some of the contents of the agreement," an IAM spokesman said.

The IAM Tuesday reached a tentative agreement with Air Canada on the fifth day of talks under federal mediation, ending 17 days of rotating strike action at 32 different cities.

At that time, union officials said they expected rank and file membership to ratify the "reasonable settlement" within 10 days. Terms of the tentative settlement were not released.

A union source in Montreal said today "nobody likes" the proposed contract which, he said, offers a 16-per-cent increase over two years.

"In my shop, everybody was against the agreement," the source said, "but it all comes down to if they want to continue striking — because that means there will be a shutdown.

"There's a big difference between knowing a contract stinks and going on strike knowing you're going to be locked out," he said.

More than 100 flights had been cancelled earlier as the airline tried to return to normal operations following IAM strikes during the contract negotiations.

Ramp workers are responsible for handling baggage, loading and unloading of food and other supplies and cleaning aircraft cabins.

About 150 ramp workers at Toronto International Airport earlier walked out for two hours Tuesday night.

Sewage Flood In L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An underground sewage pipe burst Tuesday and flushed millions of gallons of raw sewage into the Los Angeles harbor. Health authorities today banned swimmers, water skiers and scuba divers.

The city sanitation bureau said it could take several days to a week to halt the flow of sewage, running at three to five million gallons a day, but it could be weeks before the harbor is safe for water sports.

Tons of chlorine was rushed to the harbor to reduce the bacteria count. The sewer pipe break ocurred at 3 a.m. Tuesday, and within 12 hours the city had dumped 1,500 pounds of chlorine into the harbor — enough for 3,000 home swimming pools.

The county health department prohibited all water contact sports in the harbor because of the danger of disease from the vast quantities of bacteria present in the sewage. The county board of supervisors ratified the quarantine in an emergency meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The quarantine affects Cabrillo beach, one of the city's biggest, which draws an average of 7,500 bathers on summer weekdays and up to 12,500 a day on weekends.

The ban will remain in force until the water meets state bacteria count standards, and officials said that could be a matter of several weeks.

The pipeline break, described by one official as "one of our larger ones of the past 10 years," occurred in a line on Terminal Island just outside the pumping plant that propels incoming sewage to a treatment plant.

TAX BILL APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to Finance Minister Turner's controversial corporate tax measures today.

Conservative and Social Credit members joined the Liberals in voting for the measures, which now will undergo study in committee, where amendments are possible.

The official vote showed 194 in favor and 30, all New Democrats, against.

Thirty-nine members were missing from the House when the vote was taken—seven Liberals, 26 Conservatives, one New Democrat and five Social Crediters.

Harbor Project Okayed

But representatives of the developers, CIL Properties, left the council-in-committee meeting feeling far from elated at having cleared the first major hurdle toward the objective which they first unveiled more than six months ago.

CIL president John D'Eath told reporters the decision to get down to negotiating a land-use contract would be encouraging if the laid-down criteria for those negotiations were more in the developers' favor.

As it is, he said, the general guidelines recommended by the Advisory Planning Commission and endorsed by council's committee-of-the-whole represent a considerable reduction in the development's density.

D'Eath said this means the economic feasibility of the original proposal has been whittled down to the point where CIL considers itself at a disadvantage in relation to the planned Wharf Street development of developer J. A. Reid.

He noted that Reid is allowed to build to a floor-space ratio of 3 to 1 — that is, to provide a total floor area three times the site area — whereas he is being limited to a ratio of 1.4 to 1 (total floor area of 455,420 square feet or nearly 80,000 square feet less than CIL originally proposed).

Under Reid's land-use contract with the city he is having to provide only a "very narrow" waterfront walkway in front of his complex, D'Eath said.

But CIL is expecting to have to foot most of the bill — possibly as much as $250,000 — for providing a proper landscaped park skirting the Laurel Point foreshore.

"We (CIL and Reid) are competing for the same tenants, the same hotel business," D'Eath said. "Naturally we're disappointed . . . but I guess that's the way city councils work."

At his weekly press conference this morning, Mayor Peter Pollen said he considers D'Eath's concerns about com-

U.S. CUTS DUTY ON OIL

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon threw open the United States border to duty-free imports of petroleum products from Canada Tuesday, at a time when Canada already has imposed some export controls to protect its own consumers.

The president signed a proclamation delaying until next May 1 the period when a new system of "fees" is to apply to imports of Canadian petroleum products — separating Canadian imports from a fee schedule which went into effect last May 1 for imports from all other countries.

The decision was described by one Canadian official here as a "hunting licence" for American importers to seek supplies in Canada.

However, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced last Friday that "temporary controls" would be applied to exports of gasoline and heating oils to "ensure that unusual export demand for these products does not impair supplies to Canadian consumers."

It was also reported that the U.S. administration is considering tax incentives for cars that use less gas, requiring energy consumption labels on home appliances, lowering taxes on more efficient grades of fuel and imposing higher insulation requirements for new homes.

A worsening U.S. fuel shortage was reflected Tuesday in a spot survey that indicated almost half the gasoline stations there are operating at less than normal capacity.

The American Automobile Association said its third weekly spot check of 2,924 stations on main travel routes found 47 per cent curtailing operating hours, rationing gasoline to motorists, or both.

In a similar survey of nearly 2,000 stations a week ago, 64 per cent reported normal operations. The week before that, it was 75 per cent.

Meanwhile, in Canada The National Energy Board has approved a majority of the export applications reaching it since export controls on gasoline and heating oils went into effect, a board spokesman said Tuesday.

Many approvals dealt with existing contract obligations by refiners and should not be interpreted as weak enforcement of the controls, he said.

SLIGHT GAIN FOR DOLLAR

LONDON (UPI) — The value of the U.S. dollar rose marginally today for the second consecutive day, and the price of gold declined.

The two-day rally by the dollar, following its drop to record lows in most European markets Monday, checked at least temporarily the currency's two-week downward slide.

"The heat has come off the dollar today," said a spokesman for a Swiss bank in London.

FRIEND'S BOUNTY UP NIXON'S ALLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With an assist from their friend Charles "Bebe" Rebozo, the Nixons have had a bowling alley installed in the White House so they won't have to cross the street to bowl.

The one-lane alley was built secretly last January, but has only now come to light.

Mrs. Helen McCain Smith, Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, initially told reporters that the Nixons paid for the alley out of their own pockets.

Later, however, Mrs. Smith said further checking showed that the equipment and lane were donated by a private company and that Rebozo, of Key Biscayne, Fla., paid the bill for decorating.

She declined to say what the cost was.

86% in Favor Of Strike At 11 Mills

The United Paperworkers International Union announced Tuesday its members have voted an average 86 per cent approval of strike action in the current contract renewal dispute at 11 mills.

The individual mill votes ranged from 78 per cent to 97 per cent, E. P. O'Neal, regional vice-president of the union which has 7,200 members at the mills, said today. O'Neal said he is hopeful negotiations wil resume soon with the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the companies.

Included in the dispute are newsprint machine workers at the Crofton mill and all employees at the Port Alberni, Campbell River and Port Alice mills on Vancouver Island.

The newly-reopened pulp and paper mill at Ocean Falls, which the B.C. government acquired from Crown Zellerbach, is not involved in the strike votes, O'Neal said.

"Both sides agreed ahead of time to be bound by the result of negotiations. We are trying to co-operate because they are just getting started up and people are just moving back in," he said.

UPIU served 10 days termination of contract notice on the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau late Tuesday.

So far, 72 hours strike notice required by the Mediation Services Act has not been served.

The current contract expires June 30.

Negotiations broke off earlier, while the strike votes were held last week with spokesmen for both sides expecting talks to resume after the votes had been taken.

The union said talks foundered "mainly on money matters" including health and welfare, long-term disability, pensions, vacations, wage adjustments and the main wage demand of 10½ per cent, with a minimum of 55 cents an hour, in each year of a two-year agreement.

The companies have offered a two-year contract, including a 7½ per cent wage increase with a minimum of 33½ cents an hour this year, and 7½ per cent next year.

Present base labor rate is $4.08½ cents an hour and the mechanics' rate is $5.70 an hour.

The other union in the industry, the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, with 4,500 members at eight pulp mills, has not moved to take a strike vote.

Jail Cells Bugged

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand disclosed Tuesday that some cells and visitors' areas in Canadian penitentiaries are "bugged" and stated that he doesn't know if electronic devices are used in the institutions to overhear conversations between a prisoner and his wife or his lawyer.

The solicitor-general said that when he was asked a few weeks ago if bugging was carried out in penitentiaries, he was not aware that it was. But he has since found out that the practice is followed in rare cases, he explained.

Asked if the devices are used to monitor conversations between prisoners and their wives and families, Allmand said that all he was told is that bugging is carried out on prisoners and their visitors when it is felt information concerining crimes may be obtained in this way.

He promised to investigate the matter further.

Nixon Halted Tax Audits On His Friends: Dean

By BOB WOODWARD and CARL BERNSTEIN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former White House counsel John Dean has told the Senate Watergate committee under oath that he "has documents where President Nixon requested that tax audits be turned off on friends of his," according to a written summary of Dean's testimony.

The summary, made after a closed-door session Saturday, does not describe the documentation or state the names of any of the president's friends who might have been involved in such an action.

"Nixon said that the Democrats had always had effective use of the IRS audits, but they (the Republicans) had failed," according to the summary.

The White House late Tuesday issued the following statement:

"Fragmentary leaks of charges attributed to John Dean have been appearing over the past several weeks. He will be testifying in public under oath next week. We will have no comment on that testimony before it is given."

The Washington Post has obtained a copy of two pages of the summary, prepared by staff members of the senate committee. Quotations are from the summary and not necessarily Dean's own words.

The summary also says:

—Nixon told Dean he hoped Dean was keeping a list of reporters who were giving them (the election committee) trouble and they would take care of them after the election.

—The White House thought that Sen. Howard Baker (R—Tenn.), the Republican vice-chairman of the committee, "was going to assist" the president in the Watergate hearings. Baker Tuesday night denied helping the White House and said — as he did on televison Sunday — that he rebuffed attempts by the White House to influence the selection of the Republican counsel of the committee.

—At a Feb. 10 meeting at La Costa, Calif., Dean, along with White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, former domestic affairs chief John Ehrlichman, and special presidential counsel Richard Moore, discussed paying money to the Watergate defendants.

The summary says: "Moore was asked to go to New York and prevail upon Mitchell to get money for the defendants.

HYDRO GOUGES: McGEER

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro is gouging residential consumers and should reduce gas rates by at least 20 per cent, Liberal MLA Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

McGeer told the B.C. Energy Commission that rates may still be too high, even after a 20-per-cent reduction.

He charged that Hydro is getting a rate or return on its gas distribution operation that would be unacceptable for any public body.

Hydro, unlike its competition, pays no taxes and no franchise fees, has a more efficient distribution system and still charges residential consumers about 15-per-cent higher rates, he said.

"The side-by-side operation of Inland Natural Gas and B.C. Hydro over the past 10 years is an instructive object lesson.

"B.C. Hydro obtains the same natural gas as Inland. However, it charges substantially more to distribute this gas to the customers it serves even though the area it covers has decided advantages in density of population and efficiency of service.

Plants Linked to Viruses

Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Research here has opened up the startling and disturbing possibility that human viruses may be able to infect plants and that, as a corollary, plants might be capable of serving as a reservoir of human viruses.

Such a situation would violate all existing assumptions about viral behavior, although it is known that plant viruses sometimes infect and kill insects.

Experiments carried out at St. Thomas's Hospital medical school in London and reported in the medical journal The Lancet demonstrate that the inoculation of plant leaves with a serum containing human hepatitis virus B produces dramatic local damage.

This does not, however, prove that the plants were infected or that the virus caused the damage. The virologists involved in the work lean toward the alternative possibility that the serum in which the virus lives may also contain a protein that is highly poisonous to plants.

Virologists have already tried to pass the plant-damaging "factor"—whether virus or protein—from a damaged plant to healthy plants, but without success. This suggests to them that it may not be the virus that is directly involved.

The report in The Lancet asks whether it is possible that an animal virus can reproduce itself while living in a plant, a question to which there is no answer at the present time.

Summit Discusses N-Arms

Earlier Tuesday, the Soviet Communist party general secretary lobbied members of Congress at a four-hour lunch of vodka and caviar, roast beef and baked shrimp, champagne and pineapple ice cream, seeking "most favored nation" tariff treatment for the Soviet Union.

There has been a move in Congress to deny the most favored nation treatment until the Soviets permit free emigration. Brezhnev insisted in his remarks to the congressmen that almost all Jews who wish to leave his country are free to do so.

White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said the talks here specifically would focus on nuclear disarmament and efforts to mutually reduce conventional forces in central Europe. He said they were also likely to touch on such areas of tension as the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

Both leaders have publicly given assurances that their talks will set forth a political framework in which detailed negotiations to control both the quality and quantity of strategic weapons can move to a speedy conclusion.

The lunch hosted by Brezhnev Tuesday was private, but several of the senators who attended described the proceedings to newsmen. Brezhnev delivered a two-hour speech then briefly answered questions.

Brezhnev did not refer to Jewish emigration — which the Soviets consider an internal matter which should not concern the U.S. — during his speech. But he was ready with arguments and statistics when the matter was raised by Sens. Jacob Javits, (R—N.Y.), and Robert Griffin, (R—Mich.).

Brezhnev said that last year out of 61,000 Jews who applied for exit permits, 60,200 were given permission to leave.

In New York, the Soviet mission to the United Nations was splattered with red paint and an official Soviet car was destroyed by fire early today in Queens.

Both incidents appeared tied to the current visit of Brezhnev.

Four members of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) were arrested after the paint was thrown on the front wall of the mission. They were charged with criminal mischief.

NO ILL EFFECTS SEEN FROM SKYLAB DUTY

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab doctor Joseph Kerwin said today the spacemen appeared to have withstood 26 days of weightlessness without ill effects "and I'm tremendously encouraged about the future of long duration flight."

Kerwin, Charles Conrad and Paul Weitz are due back to earth Friday. After a 12-minute question and answer session, they returned to the business of packing goods ranging from film to strawberries in their Apollo space ferry for the trip home.

Conrad promised the house-sized orbiting laboratory would be "fit in all respects" for the arrival of its next tenants, the Skylab 2 astronauts, on July 27.

The veteran space commander said in reply to a newsman's question radioed up from the ground that he thought only time would tell, but "I believe man has once again proved he can operate efficiently, well and happily in space."

"The doctors may make me eat my words, but I have the feeling that at the end of 28 days I'm going to be in better physical shape than when I came back from any one of my three previous flights, except maybe Gemini 11 which has too short duration," Conrad said.

The pilots' list of goods to be transferred from Skylab to Apollo included samples of skylab food scientists want to compare with identical specimens on the ground to see if the space food was affected by high temperatures early in the flight. The foods to be brought back are sugar-coated cornflakes, strawberries, chocolate instant breakfast.

"The CIL people will have a greatly superior site, and a greatly superior development as far as esthetics and the human aspects of the whole thing.

"They will also have much cheaper land costs and site preparation. They will have better traffic accommodation and also cheaper money because of their immense corporate financial clout," Pollen said.

The mayor pointed out that at Tuesday's meeting he challenged the CIL representatives to demonstrate with an economic feasibility study that the suggested density limitations are unworkable, and there was "little response."

The decision to proceed with drawing up a land-use contract still has to be ratified by the full council at its meeting next week.

Of those at Tuesday's meeting, only Ald. Percy Frampton opposed the move, reiterating his view that the entire development site should be moved slightly south so that the whole of the miniature headland can be given over to a park.

Aldermen Sam Bawlf and Tom Christie were absent.

The development relies heavily on an exchange of land equities between the city and the developer. The city is agreeing to partial closure of Belleville and Montreal streets, where they form a "V" at Laurel Point, as well as part of Cross Street.

In exchange, the developers guarantee public access to the waterfront.

Barrett Mum On PNE Clause

Premier Dave Barrett today refused comment on reports that the provincial cabinet will review the controversial clause in the new Pacific National Exhibition Act which requires PNE contracts lasting past December, 1975, to be renegotiated.

"I have no comment on that," Barrett said in an interview this morning.

"It's nothing new," Macdonald said today.

"Bob Williams (resources minister) said we'd be discussing the thing — I just review it. I just said, as Bob Williams has, that we'd be discussing it in cabinet as all new legislation is," Macdonald said.

Asked if the government was reacting to strong criticism levelled against the PNE Act clause by Senator Ed Lawson, regional president of the Teamsters Union, Macdonald said only, "we have had representation from a lot of people on one thing or another the word review."

"Of course we are going to other in terms of what we should do with the PNE Act."

Lawson, along with B.C. Jockey Club president Jack Diamond, and other groups using the PNE facilities, have protested the government's plan to renegotiate the long-term contracts.

THREE IN FAMILY CATCH DIPHTHERIA

Three children from one family are in Royal Jubilee Hospital being treated for diphtheria, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said today.

The senior public health officer for Greater Victoria said they bring to 29 the number of people treated in the region since diphtheria cases began to appear in mid-March.

The three children had all been immunized and were displaying mild symptoms but throat swabs from them tested positive.

Diptheria can be successfully treated with antibiotics but all cases have been hospitalized, partly to provide isolation. Most of the 29 people treated so far have returned home.

BLOOD BANK BOOSTED

There were 147 donors at Red Cross House, 22 more than the daily objective and 47 more than Monday's clinic.

The final clinic this week is on the second floor of Eaton's home Furnishings building today and closes at 4 p.m. Over-all objective is 350 donors.

Pound Appeals

Victoria doctor Brian Pound has filed a notice of appeal against the dismissal of a libel action heard in B.C. Supreme Court last February.

Pound claimed unspecified damages for libel in a Jack Scott column published in the Times Aug. 13, 1971, and further reprinted and distributed by Baker, Lovick BBDO Limited and Western Direct Mail Services Limited. Scott's column followed a Times interview with Pound Aug. 10, 1971.

The doctor claimed the Scott column held him up to ridicule and contempt in his practice as a physican and surgeon in Victoria.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton dismissed the action March 22.

Mitchell ignored it." Sources said the reference is to former attorney-general John Mitchell.

In addition, it says that Dean received a message from convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt "in which Hunt said he wanted $72,000 for living expenses and $50,000 for attorneys' fees or he would have things to say about the seamy things he did for Ehrlichman while he was at the White House."

Another source says Dean told the senate investigators that Ehrlichman urged him to pressure the CIA into providing assistance — apparently for a cover-up — nine days after the Watergate break-in.

In related developments:

—The Finance Committee for the Re-Election of the President was found guilty today on three counts of violating the Campaign Disclosure Law because it did not report a $200,000 cash contribution from financier Robert L. Vesco. Judge George Hart imposed the maximum fine of $1,000 on each of the three counts.

—Former defence secretary Melvin Laird, who has been named by Nixon to help rebuild the White House staff in the wake of the Watergate incident, "has been accused of trying to intervene in an SEC stock fraud investigation of Florida railroad tycoon Edward Ball," the New York Daily News reported today.

—Sen. Sam Ervin told a news conference in North Carolina Tuesday that he voted to postpone the hearings because he "was afraid the committee would be blamed for anything that went wrong" in the current summit talks between Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Comox Sweep Set

Chief of defence staff General Jaeques Dextraze today ordered the grounds of the Comox Valley Exhibition be swept to determine if any electronic devices remain on the old army firing range.

A Canadian armed forces spokesman at CFB Esquimalt said a reconnaisance team would be going into the area shortly.

"It was first thought that 65 acres was involved," he said, "but this could be expanded to 100 acres."

He said the sweep is expected to be completed by Aug. 1.

The spokesman said the defence department was concerned about public safety and that former firing ranges, now within easy reach of the public, would receive top priority in the program of sweeping.

Those situated in areas more remote would have lower prioritiy he said.

Meanwhile, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall today called for a complete search of all abandoned military firing ranges in the province.

"I have asked my department, including civil defence officials, to discuss the matter with the department of lands, and then with the department of national defence to make sure that once and for all this job is going to be done properly and completely this year," Hall said.

He said close to 300 mortar shells, bombs and grenades have been discovered on two old ranges near Vernon since men began sweeping the area last April.

B.C. Aiding Alberta Insurance Inquiry

The B.C. government has already begun an exchange of information with Alberta on the operations of several insurance companies which Alberta will put before a public inquiry this summer.

Cosmopolitan Life Assurance Co., PAP Holdings and related companies will all be investigated by a government commission according to an announcement made Tuesday by Alberta's Attorney-General Mervin Leitch.

The decision to investigate the companies comes after months of agitation by a group of shareholders in Alberta and B.C. who allege that stock manipulation may have taken place.

B.C.'s Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today shareholders had approached Trade and Commerce Minister Gary Lauk with complaints about the companies.

"But with all these companies, I don't know if it was exactly the same people," he said.

"We have a lot of materials in our offices as the result of our investigations and inquiries into these firms," Macdonald said, adding that his department had already begun supplying this information to Alberta.

It's really a very complicated issue and I can't really comment any further than that," he said.

The firms reportedly involved include Cosmopolitan, PAP, Seaboard Life Assurance Co., Sioux Holdings Ltd., Canamera Enterprises Ltd., and Rocky Holdings Ltd.

These firms ceased operating in Alberta in 1971 and Cosmopolitan is now being wound up under federal legislation.

Albert Jaasama, of Vancouver, president of Cosmopolitan, is now facing charges for issueing a false prospectus in connection with Canamera Enterprises and PAP Holdings; and with false pretences involving Canamera and Seaboard Life.

Jaasama has also pleaded not guilty to two charges under the Alberta Securities Act of being an unregistered dealer and trading unlisted shares on the Vancouver market which were not registered in Alberta.

In announcing the public inquiry, the Alberta Attorney-general said a commission for the hearing, to be held sometime after mid-August, has not yet been decided on.

Leitch said a public inquiry is necessary because some of the companies' affairs would not be made public during liquidation proceedings and during the Jaasama hearings.

Crowds Mass for Peron

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Three persons were reported injured in shooting today as a huge crowd gathered on a meadow outside the Argentine capital to welcome ex-President Juan Peron home from exile.

Police said the crowd passed the one million mark five hours before Peron was due from Madrid. Cars, trucks and buses brought the celebrants for the biggest political gathering since Peron was ousted from power 18 years ago.

Thirty Peronist youth organization members, wearing black arm bands and carrying automatic weapons, exchanged shots with a rival youth group hidden in a grove of trees only 300 yards from the grandstand where Peron was to speak on arrival.

Heartless Image False, Says Management Man

The image of management as a heartless employer was called false Tuesday.

William Hamilton, president of the Employers' Council of B.C., speaking to Victoria Kiwanis, accused B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes of projecting this image.

"He painted a picture of management as a cold machine for regimenting workers into an endless stream of boring jobs," said Hamilton.

"This was an obvious attempt to reinforce a widely-held stereotype of management that it couldn't care less about opportunities for individual growth and personal job satisfaction. This is a false picture.

"It would be untenable for modern management to hold such blind attitudes.

"It is widely accepted and recognized by management that the most important resource in industry is the people who do the work, from those in the union ranks up, and that continuing discontent and unhappiness at any level will ultimately destroy the entire organization.

"The very success of industrial organization over the next 30 years will depend upon the innovative ability of management to create work that is as meaningful and fulfilling to employees as it possibly can be.

"This management awareness of the human side of enterprise extends far into industrial relations planning and practice in most of our large industries. It is much more than just a lot of idle talk as Haynes suggests," Hamilton said.

The employers' spokesman also told the Kiwanis that unions should not be able to veto technological change in industry.

Don't Overplay a Good Hand

Emerging from his East Block offices Prime Minister Trudeau is almost directly opposite the Centennial fountain burbling with an Alberta natural gas flame and encircled with 10 provincial and two territorial crests. Four of those crests and the premiers who represent them may be on his mind as he prepares for next month's Western Economic Opportunities Conference in Calgary.

Perhaps the prime minister thinks the four Western premiers are ganging up on him by holding their own strategy meeting here before the federal-provincial Calgary meeting. If Justice Minister Otto Lang's untimely remarks about the Westerners' "tunnel vision" on economic matters had Mr. Trudeau blessing that might well be the case.

But the Western premiers are simply adopting an old provincial ploy in dealing with federal governments. The creaking wheel gets the grease. And the West — rightly or wrongly — feels its wagon trains have been neglected for a long time. Last January's Throne speech set the stage calling for "concrete programs for stimulating and broadening the industrial and economic base of Western Canada."

That means "money" in the provincial lexicon. Premiers have always mounted up and girded for battle when they see an opportunity to fill provincial coffers with federal money. While the Victoria meeting was unique in federal-provincial relations, it was also a calculated bit of dramatics to convince the federal government of Western earnestness. During the sixties Westerners watched federal money pouring into Quebec. Now they feel it is their turn. Lowered freight rates, funding research and development money, and secondary industry demand attention.

The premiers can make a good case for all of them. But they should not overplay a good hand. Mr. Trudeau is only too aware of six other provinces and two territories with urgent needs. Alberta and British Columbia are among the country's richest provinces. When they plead poverty the rest of the country has a tendency to laugh. Eastern laughter has always made the West wince. They don't understand us; they don't care about the West. It's a familiar refrain rooted mostly in myth with more than a pinch of reality. Social Credit, the United Farmers of Alberta and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation gained provincial power in three provinces by playing on such emotions.

With Toronto little more than three hours away from Vancouver, attitudes are changing. Regionalism is waning in all but the most stubborn areas. Canada is working on its second hundred years of nationhood. The forthcoming Calgary conference is evidence of Canadian success. But the four Western premiers should keep in mind that success at Calgary should be a Canadian achievement, not a parochial Western victory.

A Small Compromise

Meeting separately in Victoria and Vancouver, Canadian lawyers and doctors reached the same conclusion. Both professions want increased internal policing. In Victoria the lawyers passed a resolution that incompetent lawyers may find themselves suspended or back in school. The doctors didn't go quite as far although, if resolutions are followed up, licences will be limited to areas of medicine in which an individual is proven competent and continues to be competent.

Such professional conscience is laudable even though it comes at a time when governments — spurred on by public criticism — are baying at the heels of many professional groups. Putting it bluntly one doctor at the Vancouver meeting said his profession is very jealous of the right to control itself and feared government would act if the profession didn't.

All professions and trades have similar problems. Bricklayers, bakers and bankers — nobody wants to have an uninformed layman peering over his shoulder and telling him how to do his job. But incompetent lawyers and doctors occupy a special place. Their mistakes and bad advice can mean life itself or severe penalties under law. And judging from their recent actions, plus the few recorded instances of negligence, they appear to take their responsibility seriously.

But we can only say "appear" because their disciplinary measures are conducted internally and usually secretly. When such actions involve a man's livelihood and reputation this is understandable. Perhaps an ever more cynical public might be reassured by the inclusion of one independent non-professional on such disciplinary boards. It's an awkward answer to an even more awkward problem, although a small compromise would go a long way to ensuring continued professional independence as government moves further into regulating the private sector.

Killer Dogs

When a man gazes across his fields at dead sheep wantonly killed by marauding dogs he becomes understandably angry and frustrated. Anger comes from investing a lot of time and energy into raising sheep from fragile lambs. Frustration comes from knowing the culprits but not being able to deal with them unless they are caught in the act.

That's the situation in Metchosin where one farmer says more than 100 sheep have been killed by dogs this year. Another farmer estimates that he has lost $600 worth of sheep and lambs since the attacks started. The B.C. Sheep Protection Act gives partial recompense for such losses but it is not enough to cover the financial worth of the sheep or the time and labor which the farmer has invested in his husbandry.

The answer lies in catching the marauding dogs and ensuring that they are chained up. If that is impossible, they must be dispatched. But Metchosin sheep farmers want action and they should get it. When men's livelihood is threatened by a pack of free-running dogs, the dogs must be run to ground.

CHARLES BARTLETT

Going Broke, Not to War

CAIRO — Like a dream that won't go away, the hope lingers here that the Nixon-Brezhnev meetings will produce some new impetus toward a settlement of Egypt's "six-year war" with Israel.

Henry Kissinger fanned these hopes by saying that the Middle East problem will be raised at the meetings, a prospect not totally consistent with Washington's past insistence that the combatants must accept the primary responsibility for finding a path to peace.

The Egyptians' dismissal of the Soviets' presence last summer was provoked in part by dismay over the latter's readiness to subordinate the problems of the Middle East to the pursuit of closer ties with the United States. Cairo's displeasure at becoming a secondary concern in Moscow seems now to be mellowing into a mild optimism that the Soviets have grown to prefer stability over turmoil in the region.

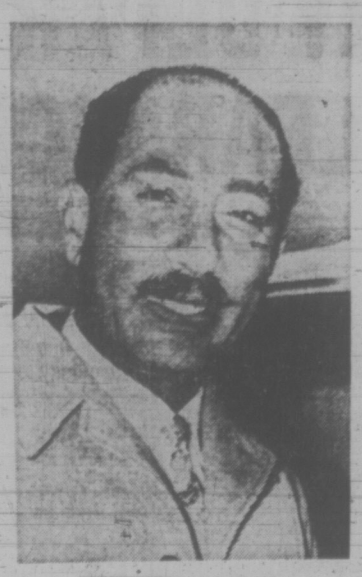
Soviet Anxiety

The rationale behind this tentative assumption is that turmoil will bring the Kremlin into confrontation with the United States at a time when it wants smooth dealings with Washington. The Soviets will almost certainly be on the losing side if there is fresh warfare with Israel. Their best bet seems to be to encourage a settlement in which they can search for areas of benevolent co-operation with the Arabs.

The frustrations which rise like warm air from the banks of the Nile are aimed now at President Nixon. Egyptians tell how American officials led by William Rogers had been coming here to say, "How can we ask Congress to help you while you have all these Russians around?" But in the months since they took the big step of asking the Russians to leave, there has been no real sign of change in Washington's attitude.

What did they expect? They had hoped that Mr. Nixon, liberated from the political pressures of American Zionists, would turn after the election to the Middle East with a freer and more decisive hand. They had hoped for the introduction of some daylight between the American and Israeli positions, some shift significant enough to give President Sadat an excuse to improve relations with the Americans.

So there is much talk here of how the Watergate events may affect these hopes. Some expect Mr. Nixon to be more tightly strapped than ever to the Israeli cause because he will need the political support that it is capable of rallying in Congress. Others maintain that he will have a real need for historic achievement, so he may be more disposed than he was last winter to launch a peace initiative.



PRESIDENT SADAT

The present situation leaves President Sadat in a painful, awkward bind. He tells his ministers that their real job is "to build the New Egyptian," and yet he cannot allow the world to forget Israel's protracted occupation of a large slice of Egypt. So he makes intermittent bellicose noises and spends large sums on weapons to keep the issue alive. But he knows well that the noises and weapons will retard the emergence of the New Egyptian.

Poking about Cairo, the visitor senses that Egypt is closer to going to the cleaners than it is to going to the war. Shiny new apartment buildings in he suburbs do not obscure the dusty disrepair into which the Jewel of the Nile has sunk or the lean lot of the average Egyptian. The economic statistics are bad enough to be held as government secrets, but the desperate need for foreign exchange is unconcealable.

Egyptians of all sorts groan at the high cost of allocations to the military. As one points out, the annual defence budget equals the cost of two and one-half Aswan dams. The cruel irony of pouring so much into arms when the social needs are so great is apparent to everyone.

No Alternative

And yet the menace of the Israelis does not leave any real alternative. Sadat is clearly growing stronger because he is as practical as the situation will allow him to be. He fully represents the Egyptian anxiety to escape the emotional dogmas of the past. But he also reflects the popular unwillingness to concede any fruits of conquest to the Israelis.

So it is natural, if unrealistic, for the Egyptians to look to the Nixon-Brezhnev talks for a way out of their dilemma. But they are looking for a solid peace on which they can build prosperity, and that is not something which can be trumped up by the big powers.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Labor Courts

It's the strike season again!

Everyone knows the management-labor conflict is one of the great hazards of society today. The political, economic and social problems created by strikes and lockouts are perhaps the greatest causes of inflation.

Both management and labor seem unable to cope with this problem. They have had ample time to prove themselves with no results. Now it's time for someone to accept the full responsibility for what is happening to us and our country. That is the job of government.

The solution is by government in special courts of law expressly designed for that purpose.

What government has the courage, dedication and ability to make this achievement? — Hopeful.

Deserved Mention

I am writing to protest the manner in which the "Cougar, Deer Movement Traced by Special Electronic Gear" article of April 16 was handled by your newspaper. The reason for the delay is that I wanted to ask Mr. Smith about the article's contents. I have now been able to do this.

The article, while giving the correct credit to the persons concerned, gives the impression that funding is being done solely by the Fish and Wildlife Branch of the Department of Conservation and Recreation. While they are providing some funds, the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, of which I am a member, along with most of the other Vancouver Island Fish and Game Clubs donated a considerable amount of money to this project, specifically the deer study.

This is an article of local interest and I think we of a local Fish and Game Club, at the least, deserve to be mentioned. — Stephen P. Quinn, 642 Galiano.

Willows Apartments

The question as to whether or not land developers ought to be permitted to erect more apartment buildings along the Esplanade at Willows Beach should be a matter of concern to all residents of Oak Bay and not just to those fortunate enough to live in that beautiful area of the municipality. For Willows Beach is Oak Bay's only large public beach, and it is doubtful whether the land developers are planning to improve upon its present attractive character.

Oak Bay Municipal Council deserves the electorate's gratitude for the forthright way in which it is confronting the problem: a bylaw is being considered which would zone back the land adjacent to the beach from apartments to single-family dwellings and thus thwart any future attempts to spoil this fine recreational area. The bylaw will no doubt receive the enthusiastic support of many Oak Bay residents when the time comes for it is to be discussed at a public hearing. — Barry F. Beardsmore, 2594 Beach Drive.

No NDP Booster

As a member of the Socialist Party of Canada, many people think I should be delighted that the NDP have been elected to prominence in B.C. I am not. The following is a brief explanation of the reasons why:

Though the NDP masquerades as being socialist, it is not. In fact, their position taken on all basic issues is anti-socialist. Like its "Communist," Conservative and Liberal counterparts, the objective of the NDP is the administration of capitalism.

The objective of the socialist movement is the emancipation of the working class through the abolition of capitalism. Realizing the need for majority awareness and support of our position, socialists set about the task of politically informing and organizing for the eventual overthrow of class-divided society. Replacing it with one of social harmony and abundance, where each will give according to their ability and take according to their needs.

A recent national TV interview with B.C.'s Premier Barrett exposed him and his party for what they are, not what they claim to be.

(a) Barrett said, "The trees and resources were created by God."

This is definitely not the position taken by socialists. The trees and resources of the earth and everything else are the result of the processes of evolution. Socialists do not believe in divine creation or any other religious phenomena.

(b) Barrett is proud to be a nationalist, and wholeheartedly supports nationalism.

Socialists are opposed to the division of world society into competing economic-social units as is the case under capitalism. We strive for the day when all mankind holds the world in common. Socialists are not nationalists.

(c) The NDP elected Barrett as their leader.

Socialists, accept the responsibility of democratic organization. Members elect representatives to carry out functions according to the directives of the membership. Leadership is a concept of fascism, not democracy and socialism.

(d) Barrett's $52,000.00 gross annual wage is a far cry from the measley $2.00 per hour working wage the NDP considers adequate for the less fortunate members of the B.C. working class. His more for me, crumbs for the rest philosophy is further evidence of his willingness to act as a political panderer on behalf of the capitalist class.

Equal access to abundance is the objective of socialists. Only through common ownership and abolishing the wages, price, profit system and democratically organizing production solely to satisfy human need can we attain real equality, harmony and abundance for all.

The NDP as well as the "Communist" Party have done more harm to the socialist movement through their opportunistic use of the term socialist and communist to support their futile and conservative reforms to capitalism, than the openly anti-socialist Socreds, Conservatives and not so Liberals who expose their sectarian interests at every turn. No, as a Socialist, I am not happy with the NDP. — Wm. H. Johnson, 6332 Central Saanich Rd.

Harmony in the Hive

With reference to the article which appeared in the Victoria Daily Times, 7 June, Page 21, titled, "Hydro Bill Stings Hornets".

By way of identification my name is Dave Cutler and I reside at 1200 Burnside Road West, Saanich. I am writing this letter as a private citizen but in fairness must identify myself as the treasurer of the Hornets Canadian Football Club.

The aim of our organization is to help and work with the youth of the Greater Victoria area, as our constitution says "The object of the club is to promote the game of Canadian Football for the youth of Greater Victoria".

The majority of the work is performed by a limited number of dedicated parents spending a great deal of time and effort to make a success of the organization. It only takes one irresponsible news article (written without benefit of research) to negate much of this effort.

The article, when read by anyone not in possession of the facts, leaves the reader with the impression that the Hornets and the Saanich Council are at serious loggerheads. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Our relationship with the Saanich Council has always been most harmonious and will continue to be.

Let the record show that the Saanich Council has just recently granted the Hornets the undisputed use of the grounds at Glanford Park from Mar. 1 until Nov. 3, '73. Let the record also show that our communication to the Council asked that consideration be given to the installation of an oil burning unit to replace the existing electric system. The article in your paper states (Para. 4) that we agreed to pay the Hydro bill provided Saanich helped with the installation of an oil burner. No such ultimatum was made and the statement is completely untrue. Let it further be shown that the electrical installation (heating and hot water) at Glanford Park was done at the expense of the Hornets and did not cost the taxpayers a penny — and the Hornets have accepted full responsibility for the subject power bill.

As long ago as Dec. 72 the "Power Problem" was discussed with a very senior Council member at the Hornets' Annual Banquet. He invited us to make representation to the Council concerning the problem — yet another expression of goodwill between the groups.

With reference to para. 5 of the article and the alleged remarks by the Parks Administrator, let the record finally show that Mr. Richman is a dedicated person who for years has had the welfare of youngsters and their playgrounds at heart. If he indeed did make the observation attributed to him I am sure it would have been made (without malice) following a fit of pique engendered by frustration resulting from the whole affair. — D. B. Cutler 1200 Burnside Rd. W.

Disturbing Enjoyment

When I read with interest E. J. Latte's letter re "ferry music," I was stimulated to add one on the same subject.

Our ferries are so quietly and efficiently managed, the surrounding scenery so inexpressibly beautiful, that it seems a pity to disturb the appreciative travellers' enjoyment with something many of us learned of with helpless dismay. Surely there are more helpful ways of spending $40,000. The only criticism I have of E. J. Latte's letter is that it is too mild. — Sara Spencer, 3610 Cadboro Bay Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 20, 1913

Even those in very high places are not exempt from the effects of the vicissitudes in the stock market. A report going the rounds of the press is that King George is $100,000 poorer than he thought he was as a consequence of the decline in CPR shares. The story is probably a Yankee invention someone will say. But even if true His Majesty need not worry. Let him hold on to his stock and he will draw very fair dividends. There are more uncertain investments than CPR stocks.

Stalin Must Be Turning In His Grave

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW
The London Observer

A good way to get the Brezhnev-Nixon encounter into some sort of perspective is to think back nearly 14 years to Khrushchev's descent on Camp David and reflect on what has changed since then — and on what may not have changed.

The changes have been startling. In 1959 General Eisenhower presided over an America emerged from the hysteria of McCarthyism and full of the confidence of power. Khrushchev was achieving his dizzy ambition to be welcomed as an equal by an American President on American soil. This was a demonstration not only of his own ascendancy, but also of the acceptance of Soviet Russia as a future partner in keeping the peace and policing the world. It was a challenge too; nuclear war was not to be thought of, but Khrushchev would not for one moment relax the ideological conflict. The Soviet Union, he declared, would catch up with America in a very few years and then surpass it.

Loss of Power

How different today . . . The old confidence expressed in Khrushchev's dynamic ebullience and America's unquestioning faith in technology and the dollar has now departed. Both Russia and America have had to suffer a sharp diminution of their power relative to the world as a whole. Neither can any longer behave as though the only serious check to its freedom of action was the existence of the other.

The hostility of China has brought about a contraction of Russia's apparently limitless horizon and deprived it of its undisputed leadership of the world revolutionary movement. America has suffered the humiliation of the war in Vietnam, and now treats with Communist China as an element in an enlarged and fluid balance of power in which Japan has an increasingly weighty part to play.

Russia has found it expedient to treat with West Germany, partly for economic reasons, partly in an attempt to consolidate the status quo in Eastern Europe on grounds more stable than an artificially sustained fear of the German menace. The new pattern of Western Europe is in the making, and the Atlantic alliance is in flux.

On top of all this, far from catching up with America, Russia is faltering in its industrial expansion and continuing to wrestle with a chronic state of agricultural crisis, being compelled to import foodstuffs on a very large scale. America has seen the dollar bowled over, and now discovers that it is heading for a fuel shortage which could threaten the whole basis of its economy. The growing consciousness among the oil-producing countries, particularly the Arab States, of the strength of their position, has created a new area of high tension which neither they nor the oil-consuming countries (including the Soviet Union) know how to handle.

One could go on like this. But enough has been said to underline the fact that the innocent certitudes of the Khrushchev era, when America and the Soviet Union took it for granted that their own direct mutual relationship was the only thing in the world that seriously mattered, have vanished, no doubt for ever.

When Khrushchev and Eisenhower came together each man spoke as though for half the world. They, the two giants, were the makers. Today it is hardly too much to say Nixon and Brezhnev are coming together for mutual support in face of the troubles that beset them from without and within.

Changing Pattern

We are faced with a truly fascinating situation to make Stalin turn in his grave and Roosevelt at least raise his eyebrows, in which the United States is being called upon to prop up the Communist system in the Soviet Union — to say nothing of Eastern Europe — and the Soviet Union to prop up capitalism in America. Both sides look like obliging. Italy, France, Germany very much, Britain to a lesser extent, are already in on the act.

What are we to make of this tacit reinsurance pact between two opposed systems? I am not one of those who believe that by helping the Russians to strengthen their economy and improve their standard of living the West is putting weapons into the hands of a foe which will one day rise up and destroy it. Such fantasies (which no doubt appeal to certain primitive mentalities inside Russia) do not accord with the facts of the changing global pattern of power in the nuclear age.

There is no doubt in my mind that the logic of events compels Russia towards detente no less than America, and that the preoccupations and ambitions of younger men born into a conservative Russia and with no memories of the revolutionary years must inevitably weaken the revolutionary dynamic. This, indeed, is happening, and has been seen to be happening, off and on, since 1956. But the logic of events takes a long time to work out and leads through many pitfalls. Old attitudes die hard, surviving the situations which produced them.

The refurbished Brezhnev (new confidence, new barber, new tailor, new jokes, new fast motorcars) is a consensus leader if ever there was one. He has achieved his present eminence and emerged as a front runner in the rapprochement stakes by the majority decision of a Politburo, or cabinet.

Nevertheless, this body includes Marshal Andrei Grechko, the architect of the invasion of Czechoslovakia, as well as the head of the KGB, Yuri Andropov, dedicated to repression at home and subversion and espionage abroad, whose unpleasant role in Budapest as Soviet Ambassador at the time of the Hungarian uprising should not be forgotten. Anyone who is inclined to believe that Brezhnev's expressions of benevolent regard for a West Germany which he was villifying until quite recently indicates a complete change of heart and manners, should take a look at the continuing stream of vicious propaganda directed from Moscow towards Israel — to say nothing of China.

A certain wariness is called for, to say the least. The danger it seems to me is that in sheer relief at the let-up in openly hostile propaganda and the general relaxation of tension, in our eagerness to be rid of the burden of expensive armaments, in the enthusiastic competition for the Soviet market, we should allow what must be a gradual readjustment to the new fact of power — which, in any case, is still very far from being understood by anyone — to be transformed into a field-day for Moscow.

Russians are very persistent in trying to eat their cake and have it. Thus, with all their talk about peace their expenditure on armaments is out of all proportion to their defensive needs, and they keep the pot stirring in the Middle East.

Stonewall Tactics

Sitting down in Vienna to discuss the reduction of armed forces in Europe, they start off firmly with proposals calculated to perpetuate their present superiority. Again, preparing for the Helsinki conference, they determinedly stonewall Western attempts to link talks about the security of Europe with questions of human rights and free movement across frontiers. Their great hope, of course, is that the democracies will weary of endless wrangling and give way point by point. And, indeed, democracies are not good at sustaining a reasonable mean between total hostility and total accord.

We have moved — and this itself is an immense step forward by all parties — from rigid confrontation, which does nobody any good, into a period of manoeuvre, which is the natural condition for a world containing sovereign states, and which stands for constant change without which no good can come. The Russians recognize this, but their aim is quite evidently to exploit the present fluidity in order to consolidate by agreement positions established by force.

Already there are voices in West Germany, no doubt inspired by the vision of vast Russian markets, raised to declare that since Bonn has made its peace with Moscow, i.e., the Soviet State, the Soviet State must be accepted as it is and has the right to expect that West Germany should do nothing to show sympathy with even the most distinguished protesters against the excesses of the regime, such as the novelist Solzhenitsyn.

Already there is a tendency in Britain and elsewhere to dismiss the Czechoslovak tragedy as an unfortunate incident over and done with.

Let bygones be bygones — by all means. Who but the dead will bury the dead? But it takes two to make a bygone. The Russians still control Czechoslovakia, and much else besides. And it was Brezhnev, then unsmiling, who presided over those brutal meetings with Dubcek and his colleagues. The Soviet Communists, with their incessant outcry against imperialism, are still the supreme imperialists.

But the day may come when Russia, reluctantly like the rest of us, will decide that other peoples must be allowed to go to hell in their own way. We should not encourage the indefinite postponement of that day by, for the sake of short-term ease, allowing Moscow to use the present period of flux to establish a barricade against the future.

What About Democracy?

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD
The Washington Post

For all of the stunning revelations of indeceney on high, something very important is missing from my daily diet of news and information.

As I hear the president was willing to place spies in the mailbox and burglars in the bedroom, or that in the name of "national security" every citizen was a suspect, I keep looking for an explanation of the meaning of all of this to the contours of what we have been pleased for nearly 200 years to call a democracy.

It almost seems as if we are all too stunned to consider it, but that, for me, is at least as timely as the next breathless revelation of hush money from The Philippines and perjury in the name of "the team."

It is remarkable simply to note that we have arrived at the anniversary of Watergate. It was just one year ago that five men in rubber gloves were found in the offices of the Democratic National Committee.

From that night to the present, the press has treated the affair largely as a police investigative story, which is properly how it began. Now, I wish to argue, it has become something very different. Now, it seems to me, the press and the nation are overdue for a deep and continuing inquiry into the implications of these revelations for the present and future and democracy as we have always perceived it.

Regardless of the extent of wrongdoing that is eventually proved, the press is under an obligation to go to the next and more difficult level of examining the question of what ought to be the proper relationship between government and the governed.

It was argued during the height of the war in Indochina that frequently the press was covering the wrong story. We were covering ground action and air support and many of our consumers were fairly thirsting for some persistent inquiry into the questions of what that war and the exercise of awesome power were doing to the foundations of American society. Eventually, we in the press came to see that the war abroad was raising large and ugly welts on the body politic at home. It is fair to say that we have not come to terms with all of them even now.

Watergate reporting can benefit from the press experience with the Indochina tragedy. All of our attention seems rivetted on those hearings and the ancillary revelations, many of which have caused some commentators to wonder aloud at "how close we came" to a police state in the name of "national security."

Having uncovered the police aspects of the scandal, the press is now obliged, I believe, to open up for debate a number of questions about how we have been doing business "in the system." It is clear to me that dangerous misconceptions persist in the minds of many Americans.

I am not just speaking of the woman from Sisseton, S.D., who wrote to The Washington Post chiding the press for its "personal vendetta" against "the presidential choice of 49 states." I am also thinking of Patrick Buchanan of the president's staff. He wrote in the New York Times chastising those who called for Nixon to enlarge his current stewardship of the White House into some sort of government of "national unity." Buchanan found such suggestions distasteful in the extreme:

"What they are urging," he suggested, "is that the president betray the mandate of 1972, that he unilaterally repeal, on their behalf, the democratic verdict of the ballot box . . ."

There, it seems to me, is where the press might begin its deeper inquiry. Irrespective of any possible guilt on the part of President Nixon, Watergate dramatizes in another form the same imbalance in this society as the Indochina tragedy: how powerful should the chief executive of the country be? The press has gravitated to the coverage of the presidency in a manner that has in times past approached awe. Much of the rest of the society concurs in this way of looking upon the president as larger than life.

We need a very clear understanding of what has become of the office when men have said that they lied, even committed crimes because someone in a credible position to do so could utter the seven simple words, "it is the wish of the president" that something or another be done.

Arguments abound as to how the presidency ever came to be an office of such power that its holder could feel justified in setting loose a secret police force on the citizenry or bomb Cambodia without a shred of authority having been granted by the other elected representatives of the people. But the press could help us understand some of the extent of that power so that we can debate in a wider arena than ever if that is what we in a democracy intend for the presidency to be.

'WE HAD NARROW ESCAPE'

THE NATION

Political invective runs heavily to epithets — the stigmatizing of any view with which one disagrees with a term everyone agrees is disreputable. In the post-Hitler years, the extreme Left, which is given to assassination by nomenclature, clobbered its opponents with the term "Fascist" to the point that more discriminating commentators almost banned the word from their vocabularies. That is a pity, for the word describes something real and far from dead.

The usual complaint, when someone cries "facism," is that the analogy is strained, if not utterly false. Too often that has been true, and indeed analogies are rarely if ever exact in the real world of politics: history is a stream, not a wheel. But consider what "facism" means: it is the seizing and holding of power, not by revolutionary overthrow of a regime but by the subversion of a country's institutions through corruption and stealth. It kindles public rage against scapegoats, it pillories dissenters, it demands blind faith in the leader, and subordinates the welfare of the citizenry to the ambitions of the state.

From 1940 to 1946, F. J. Rarig was a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States. In a letter to The New York Times (May 17) he describes the complex of events now embraced by the term "Watergate" as the "subversion of our election process, of freedom of the press and of due process of law . . . through systematic abuse of executive power."

That sounds very much like a definition of fascism, and if "Watergate" had succeeded — if the conspirators had remained hidden and the press had kept mum and the courts had done as they were told and the money had not been traced to its sources — the result could very well have been fascism.

Invective should indeed be used with discrimination: if all Fascists are scoundrels, not all scoundrels are Fascists. But though Henry Ford stated the contrary, history is not bunk. We had a narrow escape and we do ourselves no service by pretending not to know what the danger was.

From Ashes to Shredder

RUSSELL BAKER

Memorandum of extenuating circumstances. Attention V. S. O. Petrosinov, director bureau travel arrangements, top commissar division, Moscow. Eyes only and burn bag. Ashes to shredder.

From: V. T. Ulyanov, special negotiator of travel arrangements for top commissars, Washington, D.C.

Theme: Failure of assigned mission and blame therefor.

Message: As is widely known among all agents of the KGB, FBI, White House plumbing union and American press, Comrade Petrosinov's supersecret, eyes-only-and-burn-bag, ashes-to-shredder memorandum No. 05-90648-X8-AB-07 directed special negotiator Ulyanov to obtain U.S. agreement on three sights for top commissar Comrade Brezhnev to see during his U.S. visit.

Comrade Ulyanov, having made forceful representations to the American authorities on behalf of Comrade Petrosinov's list of proposed sights for seeing, reports as follows on the U.S. response of each:

(1) Response was entirely negative on proposal that top commissar Comrade Brezhnev be taken to see the Dow Jones average fall 15 points. Falls in the Dow-Jones cannot be guaranteed, I was told. Following instructions, I told the U.S. negotiator we were not interested in his counter-offer — Niagara Falls.

(2) Response was laconic and hostile towards proposal that Comrade Brezhnev be permitted to see an American journalist in jail. "Does President Nixon come to Russia and ask to look at Soviet writers in mental hospitals?" I was asked.

(3) Response to the third proposal — that Comrade Brezhnev be permitted to see a total power failure in New York City — was flat rejection. "Does President Nixon come to Russia and ask to see a total crop failure?" I was asked.

★ ★ ★

Comrade Petrosinov, I — Comrade Ulyanov — address you as one resourceful worker on behalf of the great Soviet people might speak to a comrade worker whose heart is in the place which Lenin and Marx have called right.

While I would never make suggestions so damaging to a comrade within hearing of the KGB or our comrade superiors, it seems obvious that the Petrosinov proposals for top-commissar sightseeing show grave misunderstanding of the present state of development of the capitalist imperialist character.

In effect — as will be seen by all party officials studying microfilm reproductions of this memorandum — Comrade Petrosinov judges the American capitalist mentality to be in a far more advanced state of breakdown than is indeed the case.

As can be seen from the U.S. response to his proposals, Americans have not yet reached the state of detachment and bemusement which would permit them to show the highest representatives of the USSR those sights which best illustrate the total breakdown of their society foretold by Marx and Lenin.

In this regard Comrade Petrosinov has made a grave misjudgment of the American temper, which could cost the great Soviet people vital assistance from the decaying capitalist imperialist American state, without whose help, as is well known, the USSR may be unable to eat.

As is obvious, a more mature understanding of the American character would produce a much different list of proposals for sights to be seen by top commissar Comrade Brezhnev. If, for example, Comrade Petrosinov were to be removed from authority as a result of his responsibility for the failure of the sightseeing negotiations, and a person of my own experience placed in his position, that person would know very well how to proceed.

(1) All sights which we ask the Americans to show Comrade Brezhnev should be spectacles of which the Americans themselves love to boast.

(2) These include:

(A) Lake Erie, whose incredible pollution level is bragged about as a fantastic achievement of American industry;

(B) The smog of Los Angeles, which Americans boast is one of the greatest unnatural wonders of the world;

(C) The night streets of Manhattan, whose residents love to brag that only the bravest dare walk them; and

(D) New Jersey, whose citizens boast that it has more politicians in prison or in route there than any place else on earth.

I, Ulyanov, say, "Play to the Americans' vanity." If recalled to Moscow for higher duties, Comrade Ulyanov requests to be considered as a possible successor tenant for Comrade Petrosinov's apartment.

Sewer Line Awaits Pumps

Sewers recently installed in the Ash Road area of Gordon Head should be in service by the end of August.

The estimate was made at Saanich public works committee Tuesday. Both aldermen Leslie Passmore and William Noel said they have been getting inquiries from residents who have been paying for sewers for years.

Some people have connections virtually up to their doors but are unable to link with the system because a force main is required and pumps have not been installed.

Engineer Bob Daye said the underground pumping station was designed late in the fall, Pollution Control Branch and Regional District approvals were granted shortly after and the machines were ordered in the second week of January.

Daye said there had been several delays between the manufacturer and supplier, and the latest promise of delivery is the third week of July.

Noel said he could not understand why PCB approval could not have been given 18 months ago.

But Daye said there had been little delay in approval once designs were submitted.

The pumping units are "not off the shelf," he explained. They are custom-made and come from "across the country" for assembly in Vancouver.

In other business the committee approved $10,000 worth of turnabouts for six cul de sacs.

They will be widened and paved ends of Murray Drive (1,300), Lavender Avenue ($1,000), Filmer ($3,000), Jasmine ($1,500), Adanac ($1,700) and Canterbury ($1,500).

U.S. Mail Rate Likely to Rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The postal service probably will raise first class mail rates from 8 cents to 10 cents next January to meet increased labor costs.

Postmaster general Elmer T. Klassen said that "in all likelihood" the postal service will ask the postal rate commission in September for the increase.

English Ship Fined $800 For Cowichan Bay Spill

The English ship Conon Forest was fined $800 in provincial court Tuesday for discharging oil into Cowichan Bay March 8.

Pollution prevention officer David Campbell said the master admitted pumping out ballast.

"There was oil on top of the ballast water, in the valves and in the pipe," Campbell said.

About 150 gallons of an oily mixture had been discharged but had cleared itself up a day after the incident.

"This fine is really a penalty for carelessness, rather than for the result of carelessness," Judge William Ostler said.

Studies Funds Sought

Former federal cabinet minister Walter Gordon is a "born optimist" when it comes to financing his Canada Studies Foundation.

The foundation, set up three years ago to co-ordinate a nationwide education program, has been privately funded to the tune of $3 million for five years.

When that money runs out in June, 1975, Gordon and other foundation supporters hope the provincial governments will assume responsibility for funding the program.

"It's hard to say if the government will be interested in taking over," Education Minister Eileen Dailly said after her meeting with Gordon on Tuesday.

"I'd like to talk with teachers and do some effectiveness studies. "I have two years to do that."

The B.C. government has been making an annual contribution of $4,000 to the program.

Gordon, who was in Victoria following the foundation's board of trustees annual general meeting in Vancouver, said it is too soon to talk in definite terms about government financing.

He has already met Ontario and says he hopes to meet all provincial education ministers before he begins discussing more definite takeover plans next year.

Gordon said the foundation would not seek more private funds for the program, but wouldn't comment on its course of action if government funds are not forthcoming.

"I'm sure a sensible, responsible formula will be developed," he said. "I'm a born optimist."

The foundation, incorporated in February, 1970, as a five-year experiment, has as its goal the improvement of Canadian studies in all elementary and secondary schools.

About 8,500 students and 700 teachers are now involved in the program in 38 centres across Canada.

In B.C. teams of students in Nanaimo, Powell River, Vancouver and Burnaby have joined the program and are studying various aspects of urbanization and local government.

100 YEARS LATER STILL SAME PROBLEM

OTTAWA (CP) — Another chapter in the seemingly endless national transportation policy debate ended in the Commons Tuesday night, no closer to solution than it was more than a century ago.

The main hurdle now, as then, is how to implement such a policy.

In 1864 at Quebec City, a conference of the British North America colonies adopted a series of resolutions to be presented to Queen Victoria in anticipation of the birth of Canada.

One read:

"The communications with the North-Western Territory, and the improvements required for the development of the Trade of the Great West with the Seaboard, are regarded by this conference as subjects of the highest importance to the Federated Provinces, and shall be prosecuted at the earliest possible period that the state of the finances will permit."

Delegates to that conference generally agreed railway links with the embryonic nation's frontiers were essential to balanced economic development.

As the resolution showed, money was the main obstacle.

NOTHING CHANGED

Like their predecessors, MPs still agree properly developed and utilized transportation systems are vital to national economic well-being. But the various parties disagree on how to go about it.

Transport Minster Jean Marchand said outside the Commons Tuesday he will try to convince the railways to change their freight-rate structure for Western Canada.

He was commenting on a New Democratic motion in the House calling for a national transportation policy to deal with regional economic disparity. The motion was supported by the Conservative and Social Credit parties.

While Marchand lacks the power to order the railways to change their rates, he said he "will try to convince them it isn't in the best interests of the country to maintain these structures."

Critics have produced statistics showing it costs more to transport steel to Calgary from Hamilton than to Vancouver from Hamilton; more to ship canned goods to Regina from Toronto than to Vancouver from Toronto.

Marchand said the anomalies can be rationalized: Railway officials have said Japanese competition in the steel business would wipe out Canadian firms in the British Columbia market if the railways did not get special freight rates to help meet the lower costs of shipping by sea from Japan.

But, admitting westerners would never accept the discrepancies, he said it is "preferable to change it" when it is impossible to explain it.

The transport minister said he hopes to meet railway officials before the economic conference of western premiers in Vancouver next month.

Mushroom Hunt Aided by Grant

OTTAWA (CP) — If you are curious about what some retired people are doing with their time, a glance through the latest list of federal New Horizon grants announced Tuesday will clear things up.

A group in Minden, Ont., called the Haliburton Wild Mushroom Hunters, is getting $4,670 for its favorite pastime.

The Estonian Pensioners Club in Toronto is getting $23,400 for Senior Citizens' Sauna Days, and another Ontario group called the Pinewood Senior Citizens is receiving $6,135 for a "get-to-gether."

Another intriguing grant is $1,600 for mud and rock for the Innisfail Senior Citizens Arts and Craft Club of Alberta. Another Alberta group called The Last Round Up is to receive $1,604 for Good Will to All.

The Golden Age Club of Shemogue in Cap Pele, N.B., is to get $3,054 for "awakening of elderly people" and St. Vincent's Senior Citizens Club in Halifax will receive $9,150 for "making life worthwhile for senior citizens.

These are some of 155 projects, said to involve more than 19,000 persons, which receive $1,144,036 in the last round of federal New Horizons grants.

The program was set up in 1972 by the health and welfare department to help retired persons begin and develop projects beneficial to them and to the community.

Gas Price Increase Delayed

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Federal Power Commission Tuesday deferred action on a proposed plan to set a uniform nationwide price for new natural gas at the wellhead.

Major producers told the FPC last month they want the agency to approve a price approximately triple the current national average of 25 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Without saying it would approve, the commission had announced its intention to replace the current system of area pricing on July 1.

On Tuesday, however, the FPC said it was delaying action on nationwide pricing during the life of the price freeze, which will last up to 60 days.

In a related development, commission chairman John Nassikas disclosed four producers control 48.4 per cent of the uncommitted gas reserves in the continental United States as of last June 30. The eight largest producers controlled 67.5 per cent.

Nassikas did not identify the producers, saying in a letter to Sen. Philip Hart (D — Mich.), chairman of the Senate antitrust subcommittee, the FPC had made a promise of confidentiality to the companies that "cannot be abrogated."

Hart had requested specific data on concentration in the industry after the commission announced last February that a compilation of reports from 79 unnamed producers showed a decline in uncommitted reserves of 1.2 trillion cubicfeet serves of 1.2 trillion cubic feet 1972.

Leases Net $1.6 Billion

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Oilmen offered $1.60 billion for 104 seven tracts of sea bottom Tuesday in an offshore lease sale speeded up by President Nixon's effort to boost gas and oil output from the Gulf of Mexico.

It was the third offshore sale in nine months.

Another one is expected in the fall involving offshore areas south of Mississippi, Alabama and Floriada. And one for California offshore areas is tentatively slated for December.

Bank Report Claim: They're Still No. 1

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

British Columbia's chartered banks have issued a report showing total assets of $2.2 billion at the start of this year and a growth rate of 29.6 per cent.

The report, released by the B.C. committee of the Canadian Bankers' Association, makes no mention of the rival credit unions, but it comes out less than a week after a similar report from the B.C. Central Credit Union.

The bank report is an impressive exercise in muscle-flexing and leaves no doubt that the fast-growing credit unions are still very much in second place.

The seven chartered banks operating in B.C., including the Bank of British Columbia, have a total of 742 branches, compared to the 205 credit unions referred to in the report released a week earlier.

Loans to consumers in 1972 totalled $1 billion by the banks, compared to $144 million by the credit unions.

The banks loaned $389 million to merchants and $75 million to farmers, for a combined total of $464 million.

The credit unions, meanwhile, loaned out a total of $42 million to farmers and merchants during the same period.

However, the 43 per cent growth rate by the credit unions is impressive as is the membership roll of 418,680 as of the first of January.

The banks do not have membership rolls but list 12,992 employees in B.C. during 1972.

In releasing his report, G. T. Corlett, chairman of the B.C. committee for the banks, said the $389 million in business loans was a 20.4 per cent increase over the previous year, compared with a national increase of only 11.8 per cent.

Corlett said the rapid growth of business activity in B.C. during 1972 was evident in "a dramatic 21.1 per cent increase in debits to individual accounts."

He said the debit totals rose to "almost $79 billion for the year, nearly $14 billion over 1971."

Bank loans to the provincial government and its municipalities amounted to $96 million at the end of 1972, up 15.7 per cent over 1971.

But there is one statistic favoring the credit unions that has the seven B.C. banks green with envy.

Premier Barrett had deposited $3.8 million of his $98 million surplus with the B.C. Central Credit Union, with indications more of the surplus might go to the credit union as well.

The credit union is paying 5.4 per cent to use the funds for up to 45 days. The credit union believes it will average a deposit of $15 million from the government in the months ahead.

Motor Coach Ind.

Motor Coach Industries of Winnipeg has announced a $1 million expansion of their plant in the city.

General Manager G. E. Mason said the expansion is necessary to meet projected high demand for a newly-developed inter-city bus, the MC-8 Crusader.

Hudson's Bay Co.

Hudson's Bay Co. has announced an underwriting agreement for an issue of $100 million six-per-cent exchangeable subordinated debentures due July 15, 1993.

The debentures will be exchangeable after Jan. 15, 1974 until maturity for common shares of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. at $48 a share.

If all debentures are exchanged, Hudson's Bay holdings in the oil and gas company will be reduced to 10.2 per cent of common shares. President Donald McGiverin indicated these shares will continue to be held by Hudson's Bay Co.

Gt. Cdn. Oil Sands

A first-quarter profit of more than $1.1 million reported by Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. will be lost in the following quarter, President Keneth Heddon said Tuesday.

Heddon told an annual shareholders' meeting that a scheduled shutdown "to bring equipment back to optimum operating condition" lowered production during April and May to an average of 43,800 barrels a day from the first-quarter average of 54,300 barrels.

"And of greater significance to our financial results has been the expiry, on March 31, 1972, of the 50-per-cent remission of Alberta crown royalties in effect for the previous three-year period."

Natives Have No Rights: Quebec

By ROB BULL
Times Quebec Bureau

MONTREAL — Quebec had its day in court Tuesday as legal arguments in the James Bay hearing continued and provincial lawyers led off with an attack on the whole concept of native rights.

Even if treaties have been signed with Indians in the past, they argued that no recognized Indian rights exist in northern Quebec.

There are implications affecting Indians in northern Ontario, the Prairies and the far north as well.

Antoine Geoffrion, representing the James Bay Energy Corporation, said that if the natives of northern Quebec did have aboriginal rights these had been extinguished when the Hudson Bay Company was awarded these regions as Rupertsland in 1670.

"In fact," he said, "I wonder if there ever was such a thing as aboriginal title in Northern America. Before the Europeans came, different tribes had general control over certain parts of the continent.

Form of Communism

"At one time, all the property in native control belonged not to individual Indians but to their form of government, their tribe. It was a form of communism where everything belonged to the native state of that time.

"In a general way, if a sovereign acquires land in any manner, either by conquest or otherwise, he acquires all rights of government over this area. "These include private rights unless otherwise stated."

As the new occupant of Rupertsland, Geoffrion argued that the British crown assumed control of all government rights in the area and it bestowed these rights on the Hudson Bay Company. Therefore no such thing as aboriginal title exists.

He argued that this was confirmed by the Royal Proclamation of 1763, by which the crown indicated that all Indian nations outside the area of Rupertsland had a certain status.

Move 'Unthinkable'

"It is unthinkable that the crown would have made this geographic distinction," he argued, "unless native rights had already been disposed of in Rupertsland."

In addition, he said, no treaties had been signed between Indians and government indicating that natives had any rights in the area to be developed by the massive $5.8 billion project.

The Quebec government wants to place four dams on the Grande River 600 miles north of Montreal, divert and change the water flow of four rivers and open a region half the size of Manitoba to hydropower, mining, forestry and tourist industry development.

The 6,000 Indians and 1,000 Eskimos living in the region claim that they have rights which are threatened by the project and are seeking a court order to halt the work.

"Whether Indians could have acquired rights by recognition in some way is a most complex question for me," Geoffrion said.

"When the Hudson Bay Company transferred Rupertsland to the Imperial government, it said in effect that the Imperial government had the right to dispose of all Indian claims in the territory in question.

Not Recognition

"I can't accept this as a recognition of Indian rights, merely a statement to the effect that if there are any claims to the territory in question they are your business, not ours."

When the land was transferred by the Imperial government to Canada the same conditions were made. When the territory was ceded to Canada, he said that in effect the crown transferred responsibility for all claims to rights that Indians could have.

"A simple sale by a buyer to a seller of any rights he may have," Geoffrion argued, "does not indicate that any rights exist."

Lawyers for the natives have argued that the existence of native rights was recognized in the last century when the federal government signed a series of treaties with Indians who ceded their territory to Canada in return for land and monetary compensation.

Because no such treaty exists in northern Quebec, they argued that the natives still had rights in the area.

To Keep Peace

"Treaties have not meant a recognition of Indian rights," Geoffrion argued. "There is no question of rights at all. The treaties were signed for one reason only, to keep the peace.

"Unlike our neighbors to the south, the English decided that it was easier to defraud the natives than to fight them. Therefore they made treaties and therefore there was peace.

"And the federal government dealt with the Indians in the same way. It, too, apparently felt that it was better to give them a few pennies and a few presents than to have some people scalped.

"The treaties didn't buy land, they bought peace. It was a good bargain. It apparently usually cost them $4 per Indian and a square mile of land for each native family of five.

"When the land was transferred to Quebec, the province was told to recognize Indian claims and rights and to deal with them to the same extent as the federal government had done. This could be to no extent.

$4 Per Head

"If Indian rights were described in treaties, it would lead me to believe that there were such rights. But if you sell land, you must say what land is being sold. All the treaties say is that these native rights are worth $4 a head and a square mile of land.

"It follows, then, that the 1912 boundary change does not oblige us to recognize Indian rights because the federal government had never defined or recognized them with any precision.

"The only definition we have of native rights is in jurisprudence from which it is clear that special native property rights do not exist. There are certain personal rights and others involving land use dependent on the good will of the sovereign. But this is an incomplete definition."

Lawyers for the natives based part of their case on a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision in a dispute between the Nishga Indians and the government of British Columbia when six of seven judges agreed that there was such a thing as aboriginal rights.

Noting that the Indians' claim was rejected, Geoffrian argued that in any case the same conditions did not apply in Quebec.

'Criminal Class' In Privacy Bill

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday he can live with proposed amendments to privacy legislation now before Parliament to give police greater powers to bug suspected criminals.

But a New Democratic Party member charged that the amendments, presented by Lang to the House of Commons Justice Committee, mean that the whole purpose of the anti-bugging bill "goes down the drain.

"How can you call it privacy legislation any more?" demanded Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster).

He charged that the amendments create a special class of citizen in Canada — "the criminal class" — and violate the principal that once a person has completed his sentence for a crime "that's the end of it."

The proposed amendments, modeled closely on a submission by the Montreal police force, would authorize the use of electronic eavesdropping by police on private communications of "a particular person" or "to and from a particular place."

A judge who would give the authority would have to be satisfied that a suspect met three of the following criteria: he has a criminal record; he is apparently living beyond his visible means of support; he is believed to be engaged in criminal activities; or he regularly attends places frequented by known criminals.

Leggatt argued that this means a person who has served his sentence can be continually under surveillance for the rest of his life.

"Doesn't this, in fact, add a life sentence to any major offence?" he asked Lang.

The justice minister replied that although no one should be found guilty until proven guilty, it would be "an absurdity" to suggest that no one could be investigated by police until proven guilty.

"A person with a constant record of crime has to be dealt with differently," Lang said.

Leggatt noted that the unamended legislation now before the committee for examination only would have allowed police to use bugging devices against suspected criminals when they could convince a judge that a specific criminal offence might be planned.

But to give police the power of general surveillance over anyone with a criminal record takes away one of the basic civil rights in society, Leggatt argued.

The New Westminster MP also criticized the definition of a place which may be bugged by police as "a place or premises regularly frequented by known criminals."

"This could mean there will be bugs in every one of the major beer parlors on the Lower Mainland where I come from," he said.

The amendments were defended by Liberal Hugh Poulin (Ottawa Centre).

"If a man comes back into society as he should, he will not be bothered or surveyed," he said, welcoming the move to leave police with one of their "most effective means to detect crimes."

Canada's N-Rule Hurts India

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

TORONTO—A decade of close co-operation between Canada and India that saw India adopt the Canadian Candu-type nuclear power reactor is in many ways coming to a less-than-friendly end.

The reason: Canada's insistence that co-operation on any future nuclear power reactors in India must be accompanied by international safeguards under the Nuclear no-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) that Canada has signed but India has not.

Inspection by experts from the International Atomic Energy Agency would be required to ensure the facilities in India built with Canadian help and equipment would not be used directly or indirectly to make nuclear bombs.

The whole question is one of the few major sorespots between Canada and India. And an external affairs official in Ottawa explained recently it is not scheduled for discussions between Prime Minister Trudeau and India's Prime Minister Gandhi this week during her visit to Canada.

The official explained that the positions of the two countries are rigid and that further restating of the positions is not expected to lead to a settlement.

In an interview, J. L. Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL), explained what the changed situation could mean for India's youthful nuclear power industry.

In the long run, it would probably be best for India, since the country would then be forced to develop its own technology and industrial capabilities and not rely on Canada, he said.

India is already producing much of the equipment for its own reactors. But Dr. S. L. Kati of India's department of atomic energy said India still needs to buy a number of important pieces of equipment abroad. He also mentioned that while India plans to build a number of heavy-water plants, to provide the coolant-moderator liquid for its planned new power stations, it might need some heavy water initially.

Canada is one of the few countries still producing heavy water, since its nuclear reactors all use the expensive liquid. And heavy water is one of the things that is restricted by the NPT.

Perhaps more important than that, India is thought to want to keep the door open for possible future technological co-operation with Canada, in the likely event India decides to build a larger 500- or 600-megawatt nuclear plant for use in India.

Canada in effect helped launch India's budding nuclear industry when it helped build a Douglas Point-type of reactor at Rajasthan. After lengthy delays and problems, some of them similar to the ones that plagued the Douglas Point prototpye in Canada, the Rajasthan reactor went "critical" last year, eight years after construction first started in 1964. India is hoping the plant will achieve its rated 200-megawatt maximum power output late this year.

Valley Of Elephants

CALGARY (CP) — Future fuel shortages could transform the Canmore corridor into a scenic valley of multi-million dollar white elephants, Dr. Gordon Hodgson, director of the Environmental Science Centre at the University of Alberta said Tuesday.

Dr. Hodgson was addressing an Alberta Environmental Authority hearing into land use along the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains, which, among other things, is considering several massive recreation schemes proposed in the Canmore corridor west of Calgary.

He challenged the economic feasibility of these proposals suggesting that a shortage of fuel will in the near future limit the mobility of people.

"It is unfortunate that many of the development proposals for the eastern slopes are short sighted in this respect. They are geared to car driving, energy consuming, recreationist."

It is vital that developers consider in their long-term planning potential clientele and the services these people will require, he said.

How the public will travel in these recreation areas 10 to 20 years from now also must be considered.

As a result of increased costs of energy lifestyles in the Western world will change, he said. Recreation patterns will be restructured — partly toward greater use of the urban scene and toward a more focussed use of the mountainous regions.

Minister Hits Road

EDMONTON (CP) — Education Minister Lou Hyndman will take a 44-mile school bus ride next Monday through the county of Parkland to get first-hand experience about the provincial busing system.

"In all parts of the province, including Edmonton and Calgary, millions of miles are travelled by school bus," the minister said. "It seems the minister should get an understanding of what is going on by talking to the drivers and students."

Booksellers Lauded

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The Alberta government is positive and sympathetic to the problems of publishers and booksellers, culture, youth and recreation minister Horst Schmid told the Canadian Booksellers' Association Tuesday.

Schmid told the association's annual banquet it was to be commended for its production of good books and for its promotion of Canadian authors.

Police Pay Hiked

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A one year agreement providing an eight-per-cent increase to the city's policemen, retroactive to Jan. 1 this year, has been signed by the Moose Jaw Board of Police Commissioners and the Policemen's Association.

As well, the police department are to receive a further six per cent effective July 1.

Blair Promoted

CALGARY (CP) — The appointment of Dr. W. R. N. Blair, a recognized authority in the field of mental health, as associate vice-president (research) of the University of Calgary was announced Tuesday.

Dr. Blair, currently professor of psychology at the university, was author of the Blair Report on Mental Health published in 1969.

JAL Rejects Concorde

TOKYO (AP) — Japan Air Lines has accepted an offer for the return of its $700,000 deposit from the builders of the Anglo-French Concorde supersonic transport, airline president Shizui Asada said today.

He said his airline is not inclined to buy the controversial jet at the present time.

Asada said the airline's options for three Concordes remain valid until the end of the year despite the recovery of theh deposit, and that a formal decision would be delayed until the options expire.

Airline officials said the retrieval of the company's $700,000 worth of "serious money" occurred when British Aircraft Corp. and Societe Aerospatial, the plane's builders, offered to return the funds. The airline didn't explain why this offer occurred.

Risk of Flooding Prompts Saanich Building Cutback

A freeze on new construction in a 12 square block area of north Gordon Head was recommended Tuesday by Saanich public works committee because of poor drainage and risk of flooding.

Aldermen urged council to approve the action and to request priority be given to installation of drainage systems.

"If we don't freeze the area we're just asking for trouble because there's just nowhere to drain the water," said municipal engineer Bob Daye.

The area is bounded by Kenmore, Columbia, Hawthorne and Robinwood. It contains 67 houses and 31 vacant lots, for which six building permits are pending.

Committee was told the administrator is examining long-range capital proposals for complete drainage of the area, which is relatively flat and with poor natural runoff.

The move comes at a time when residential development of Gordon Head is keying for a new surge as construction of sanitary sewers proceeds toward completion this year.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said the freeze is a sensible move, provided potential builders could be assured of reasonably quick action to allow development to continue.

In a related move, committee was asked by the engineer to recommend to council a new method of guaranteeing that developers install essential services to property.

Practice has been to require a cash deposit refundable with completion of the work, in which services are defined as a road properly gazetted and accessible to emergency vehicles, water supply, sewer or approved sanitary disposal method, and an approved drainage system or ditching.

Daye said the municipal solicitor interprets recent provincial legislation to mean that cash deposits are no longer legal and he recommended that building permits be withheld until essential services have been approved.

Passmore said he was worried that this would create inflexibility in an already intractable system.

"You always hear that Saanich is the worst municipality to get a building permit. I don't exaggerate; you hear it all the time," he said.

Daye did not disagree, but offered the explanation that "in many cases it is not always our fault," and pointed to other regulatory bodies such as metro health.

But he said procedure had improved in the past four months and further progress is expected with the recent appointment of a full-time subdivision engineer. Faster granting of permits is a high departmental priority, Daye said.

The committee asked for more study by the engineer, solicitor and development engineer before reconsidering the proposal.

Prisoner Home for City

Half-Way Centre to Handle 15 to 20 Inmates

The Canadian Penitentiary Service will open a community correctional centre in Victoria this fall, a supervised home where prison inmates will be eased back into the community.

In a letter to Mayor Peter Pollen describing the program, deputy regional director George Foster said the service is interested in renting a house which will accommodate 15 to 20 as well as a staff of about seven.

While a location has not yet been decided, the penitentiary service aims to have the centre operating by Sept. 1, Foster said from Vancouver today.

The letter describes a community correctional centre as "basically a supervised residence for inmates who are carefully selected for release on the basis of individual response and progress, and a service by which they are provided with necessary contacts and guidance as they serve the remainde of their sentences working or gaining further education within the community."

There are two centres in Vancouver, one of them in operation for five years, and others in major centres across Canada.

"The inmates who will be assigned to the Victoria community correctional centre will be on day parole," Foster's letter says. "As the name implies, this is a form of parole which permits inmates who are nearing the end of their sentence to leave the penitentiary on a day-to-day basis, usually to work or study in the community. It is an accepted and successful program."

The letter to Pollen says it is not seeking endorsement of the plan.

"However, if you or city council do have any reservations or further questions, would you please let me know. . . ."

Asked for his views today, Pollen said introduction of this type of centre into an established neighborhood will obviously have "sociological ramifications," but it is difficult for the layman to know what those will involve.

He said one of the things he will want to know is the originating source of the inmates.

"If they were coming from one of the advanced crime areas such as Montreal or Vancouver I would question its advisability," he said.

But if the inmates were "run-of-the-mill" offenders seeking to rehabilitate themselves into society it would be difficult to find any real grounds for concern.

Foster said today almost all of the centre's residents would come from William Head, a minimum security prison being upgraded to medium security.

William Head director Gamaliel Milner said the inmates going to the Victoria centre would be those with a link to the community, either former residents or attending school here.

While the length of time an inmate might spend at the centre will vary, he estimated it might average two or three months.

Foster's letter to Pollen notes it is now a legal requirement that every inmate released from a penitentiary must accept a period of supervision.

He added today that a new policy has the National Parole Board approving all parole cases, meaning there will be a double screening of all inmates going to the Victoria centre. They will have to be considered and recommended first by the penitentiary service and then cleared by the parole board.

The two Vancouver centres have produced no problems, he said.

CONSTRUCTION MEN HURT IN FALL

Two construction workers were rushed to Victoria General Hospital early today after falling from the top of a three-storey apartment building.

Frank Pohl, 22, of 3030 Jutland, and Bruce Atkinson, 33, of 6910 Beyness, were unloading 2500 pounds of lumber which had been hoisted by crane onto some framework for a balcony at 820 Craigflower.

The framework collapsed and the lumber crashed through two other sets of studs to the ground. Both men fell with the lumber and another man, Gene Bouchard, was left hanging in the air from the crane. He swung onto the roof.

Pohl was admitted to Victoria General for observation and Atkinson was released.

Mrs. Follows Mr. In Mayor's Chair

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Greater Victoria's second lady mayor has been elected with a mandate any politician would envy.

Mrs. Ev Mountain, 211 Anson, recently defeated five male candidates for the mayoralty of Work Point army base. Almost 90 per cent of the electors went to the polls.

Heading a council of five men and three women with eight others on the "stand-by list" in case they're needed to replace councillors posted to other places, Mayor Mountain has no illusions as to how she won.

The first woman to head the armed forces base's council, she explains:

"I've just lived here so long —9½ years—they simply recognized my name more than most of the others."

With her first regular council meeting slated for July 17, Mrs. Mountain has had no trouble appointing committee chairman either:

"They just filled in all the offices. They all knew what they wanted, recreation or whatever."

Mother of three girls and a boy, Work Point's new mayor explains her main duty:

"To try and produce for the community what the community wants and to try and help people solve their porblems as they come up."

With 15½ years of on-base living to her credit—three of them in Calgary and another three in Germany—she has plenty of expertise.

When Mayor Derek Bamford was elected the first mayor of Work Point in 1971, naturally, a mayoralty chain of office was a priority.

Undoubtedly the most inexpensive mayoralty trapping in Greater Victoria, it's also the most unique.

Emblazoned on it are the cap badges of the various units to which the Work Point residents are attached.

Appended from its base is a shiny length of pipe, emblematic of another piece of local history—the Macaulay outfall which was installed the year of Work Point's incorporation.

To his surprise, Mountain was elected mayor in 1972 and he's delighted the mayoraly seat is becoming a family tradition.

Mayor Mountain has yet to meet her counterpart, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

She has one big advantage over Mrs. Elford.

Instead of raising taxes to run her operation, Mayor Mountain only has to call on willing women volunteers to cover expenses by putting on fund-raising events.

With no tax troubles, she won't have to climb political mountains to keep atop the popularity poll.

Pollen Touts Young for Mayor

Mayor Peter Pollen has suggested to Ald. Mike Young that he consider running for the mayoralty in the Nov. 17 civic election.

Pollen disclosed the suggestion at his weekly press conference this morning, telling reporters that Young has said neither yes or no but is "thinking about it."

Asked whewther he intends to seek re-election when his current two-year term expires, Pollen said he would like to see the city continue the "enlightened planning" set in train over the past two or three years, and he feels sure that would happen under the leadership of a "young, high-calibre individual" such as Young.

"But if Neanderthals were to run I might get slightly Irish and say 'no way'," he added.

Pollen said after two years as an alderman and nearly two as mayor he tends to think he needs a change, and "there are a million things I could do with my time."

During the conference, the first since his recent visit to Charlottetown, P.E.I., for the convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Pollen volunteered comment on a wide variety of topics ranging from local civic problems to the fiscal policies of the federal government.

He took pains to stress that city council's regular Tuesday afternoon "caucus" sessions "are not and nor have they ever been in camera."

Pollen said the weekly "bull session" is a useful way for him to bring aldermen up to date on the week's developments, and for council to discuss fully, without the debate limitations of full council-meetings, a wide range of subjects.

But the only matters held in camera are those concerning property transactions and personnel, he said.

These were some of Pollen's other observations:

On the CFMM conference — Although much time was frittered away on social activities, the conference did accomplish a great deal. One of the things which impressed him was Canada's wealth of "extremely astute" mayors and aldermen, often standing "head and shoulders above the representatives of some senior governments."

On reports that developer J. A. Mace is fed up with battling the city over his proposed Bay Village development and considering pulling out — "I will be delighted to contribute to a going-away present. If he is going away it will be one of the delights of my life."

9.8% PAY BOOST FOR SENIOR STAFF

An across-the-board salary increase of 9.83 per cent for senior city hall staff was recommended Tuesday by city council's committee-of-the-whole.

The increase, effective April 1, 1973, will apply to 40 department heads, deputies, professional assistants and non-union secretarial staff and will cost the city an estimated $57,000 this year.

Provision for the increase was made in the city's 1973 budget.

The recommendation will go to council's finance committee for endorsement Thursday, and will likely be ratified by council next week.

Labor Council Tie Rejected

Members of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Government Employees' Union have overwhelmingly defeated a move to affiliate with the Victoria Labor Council, it was announced today.

The branch has 2,000 members and 1,434 of them voted in the referendum.

Against affiliation with the labor council were 1,150 members, or 80.2 per cent of those voting, while 269 were in favor and 15 ballots were spoiled.

Branch president Pat Harkness said he is "very pleased" at the 71.7 per cent response in the referendum and "I have no sour grapes at the result. That's their wishes."

He said there are probably 1,150 reasons for the rejection of affiliation.

"There is a definite need to revise the historical attitude of predominantly white collar groups towards labor councils at the local level," he said.

"There's a need for the public image of labor at the local level to be improved. Organizing white collar groups now is becoming a reality."

Harkness noted that the BCGEU has been affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress for a long time and recently it affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

"May be they just felt it's enough at this time," he said.

Marriage Saved Says Escaper

A man who said he escaped from William Head institution to save his marriage told the court Tuesday he had accomplished his purpose.

Brock Flett, 25, was sentenced to six months in jail for escaping lawful custody Jan. 1 by Judge William Ostler.

Flett was picked up by police at Cook and Pembroke Monday afternoon.

He had been due for release in November after being sentenced in November, 1969, to five years for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. He was paroled in July, 1971, but was sentenced to six months in May, 1972, for attempting to deal in a forged document.

Flett's six-month sentence must be served after his regular term expires.

★ ★ ★

"My being in jail had been so tough on our marriage I had to get out to save it," Flett told Ostler.

Flett told the court he had taken his wife and two-year-old son, who he had never seen before he escaped, and gone to live and work in California.

"It was a good five months," Flett said.

"I showed her I could get a job and build a family. I wanted to get my time in and get it over with and I'm confident in my head I can do it.

"We got things straightened out and I decided to come back to Victoria and turn myself in. Unfortunately I was picked up before I had a chance to do it."

Flett said his wife was pregnant again and he now had a sense of responsibility.

Ostler said Flett's attitude was a good one.

"But you must be patient and I hope you can spend you jail sentence with as much patience as you can muster. When your time is finished, you can return to your wife and family."

Flett's sentence was followed with a court appearance by his brother, John Clendoh Flett, 22, of 804 Esquimalt, on a charge of armed robbery.

Flett was remanded for one week so he could consult a lawyer.

Y-Times Meet Draws 900

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

They wanted so much to scale it down a bit, but there was just no way.

The annual Y-Times track and field meet, to be held Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium, continues to be one of the biggest and most popular sports events in B.C.

Hoping for a smoother operation and fewer headaches, officials said recently they wanted to reduce the number of entries from the 800 who competed last year to a more manageable 500 or so.

They passed the message on the clubs, but there was no keeping back the kids. So what have they got? A record total of 900 entries!

Meet director Jack Rowe shook his head Tuesday and said with a grin: "It appears impossible to cut it down."

Still, Rose said, for the first time in the history of the meet, sponsored jointly by the Victoria Times and the YM-YWCA, each age group will be divided into "A" and "B" classes "and this should make for better handling."

Athletes from Seattle, Tacoma and other parts of Washington, Calgary, Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island will take part.

More than 30 clubs will be represented in a program that includes two events for tykes (nine and 10-year-olds) and a full schedule of events for peewee (11 and 12-year-olds), bantams (13 and 14), midgets (15 and 16) and juniors (16 to 18).

There will also be a few open events such as the men's 10,000 metres featuring marathoner Bruce Shaw, which will start Saturday's program at 9:15 a.m. Sunday's events start at 10 a.m. Final prize giving is expected about 3:30 p.m.

Many of the young stars who were named to B.C.'s team for the Canada Summer Games at weekend trials in Richmond will be competing, including Patti Loverock of Vancouver, the B.C. women's 100-metre record-holder.

Among other distaff stars are Joanne Calverley of Nanaimo, one of 12 Islanders named to the B.C. team. She is competing in the shot put and discus.

Features in the midget class will be Tom Griffin of Victoria Mercuries, who has had a time of one minute, 58.6 seconds for the 800 metres and 4:02 for the 1,500 metres, and Ted Roberts of Port Alberni in the decathlon.

Wendy Davies of the Flying Y Track Club, B.C.'s outstanding bantam girl athlete in 1972, will be in action and other leading Victorians competing will include Cheryl Blevins, Bev Cox, Ulla Hansen, Ernie Carson, Fraser Syme, Richard Kirham, Charlie Thorne, Bob Williams, Peter Spurr, Tim Griffin, Tony Ellwell, Terry Olson and Ken Martin.

Rowe said the response from people willing to act as officials had been "most encouraging."

"We are looking forward to a terrific meet," he said.

Church, Family First For Miller—Then, Now

John Miller won the U.S. Open golf championship on Sunday with one of the finest competitive rounds of golf ever played. He also ranks first in the hearts of many who never play the game.

There is little doubt that his eight-under-par 63 will take some beating, if it ever is beaten, and the fact that it came in one of the most prestigious of all golf tournaments makes it the more remarkable.

The pressure must have been unbearable, but watching Miller on the big screen it seemed nothing could stop him — and nothing did. Actually, if the pressure got to anyone it was those behind him, Arnold Palmer, Julius Boros, et al, who didn't quite match up in the final test.

True, it might have been to Miller's benefit not to have played with a Jack Nicklaus or a Tom Weiskopf in the pressure cooker of head-to-head competition during those final fateful holes, but that takes nothing away from his victory.

He still had to make the shots for his nine birdies, another remarkable feat, and obviously a record that may never be equalled or bettered either, and with a little more luck he could easily have had two more birds, especially on the 18th, where he lipped out.

If John Miller now suddenly is one of the new bright lights on the golf scene, he also is a very human young man. Because when he had won the Open he probably startled everyone by saying that golf to him wasn't all that important. His church and his family came first.

A Sponsor's Good Reasons

Oddly enough, almost the very same words were said of John Miller three years ago this August at Royal Colwood. And reported here.

It was the occasion of the Lefty-Righty tournament and the leader on the first day was a chap named Tom James of San Francisco. The name possibly wouldn't mean much except that on that very same day, a 23-year-old young man named Johnny Miller had just shot a 68 in the annual PGA classic at Tulsa and was tied with one of golf's greatest players, Jack Nicklaus.

James was vitally interested beeause it so happened that he was the fellow who had sponsored Miller on the pro tour.

It wasn't for the usual reason that James became a sponsor — he didn't want, or take, any cut from Miller's earnings.

"I gave him $15,000 with no claims on his winnings," said James. "He didn't have the money to get started himself and as I had watched his career with interest, I thought he had an excellent chance to make a success of it."

"He can pay me back whenever he can," James also remarked. "There is no hurry."

James also gave an insight into Miller's character that day, and because of that chance conversation, Miller's career just may have been examined and followed more closely from this corner in the intervening years.

"He is very religious," said James, "and he recently got married in a Mormon temple, and it's not every Mormon who can be married in the temple. He's completely dedicated to his church and doesn't drink, smoke o rswear."

'I Think He'll Make Good'

That is the same John Miller who since then has often threatened to break it big on the golf trail, coming close, but never quite cracking the major events.

A few years ago, he was leading the Masters with only five holes to play, but faltered under the pressure and gave way to Nicklaus.

But not on Sunday at Oakmont. He reached his zenith. And he was still charging at the finish. He didn't play safe on that final hole. He went for the bird, and barely missed.

If he couldn't quite believe his good fortune — until all the others had run out of shots, but he did say "I have so many to thank for this."

One of those was Tom James of James Chemical Co., and it was written three years ago of James:

"This has to be one of the most refreshing approaches to sport to pass across this desk in a few years. Sport could do with more Tom Jameses."

There is no reason to alter that opinion today.

Or as James said:

"I just wanted the kid to have a chance. I think he'll make good."

He has.

Gordie Has One Regret—Years

HOUSTON (AP) — Gordie Howe has signed a million-dollar contract and fulfilled an old dream of playing on the same team with his sons. Now there is only one regret.

"My only regret is I'm sorry I'm not the Gordie Howe I was 10 years ago to fulfill the goals the Aeros have in store for me," the National Hockey League Hall of Famer said Tuesday after signing a four-year contract with Houston of the World Hockey Association.

"It's not too often an individual gets a second chance and that's what the Aeros have given me. A chance to play with my sons."

Howe's sons, Marty and Mark, signed four-year contracts for $400,000 each two weeks ago.

Howe, 45, retired from Detroit Red Wings as a player two years ago and became a vice-president in the organization. A wrist injury figured in his retirement but Howe said that won't be a problem.

"Although my golf score doesn't indicate it, the wrist is fine. It doesn't hurt even when I hit a bad shot. I'm sure it might hurt a little if it gets in the way of somebody's chest. But I can't change my habits now."

Howe's contract is for four years and he can play as long as he wants, but most of the talk is about playing one year and then retiring to an administrative position.

"I'd be foolish to jump in and say how long I could play. But regardless of the time I play, it will be 100 per cent."

Howe's contract calls for a $500,000 bonus and $500,000 spread over four years, and he said it "puts our financial goals ahead about six to 10 years."

Despite earlier differences, all past unpleasantness is at least publicly forgotten between Howe and the Red Wings.

Coach Ted Garvin said in Port Huron, Mich., he hopes Howe's decision to return to the ice works out, but it's hard for even a young man to return to active play after a two-year layoff. Howe is nearly 46.

Earlier, Red Wing officials said they wouldn't argue with Howe's decision to leave the NHL for the Houston club.

"We can never forget his countless great moments with this hockey club and wish Gordie and his family every success and happiness," the spokesman said.

Lachmund Advances

Unseeded Joe Lachmund Tuesday night stormed into the semi-finals of the men's singles in the Victoria Racquet Club's annual tennis championships.

Lachmund, a new member who earlier upset fourth-seeded George Walton 6-3, 6-2, went onto beat Derek Wild 6-2, 6-4 and then Don Senese 6-1, 6-4. He plays the winner of tonight's quarter-final between top-seeded Grey Miller and Steve Auchinachie.

Another upset came when unranked Barry Waters downed second-seeded George McMinn 6-4, 6-4 Tuesday.

The week-long tournament ends with all finals Saturday.

Stars Boycott Wimbledon

LONDON (AP) — The world's top tennis stars, angered by the suspension of Nikki Pilic, walked out on Wimbledon today and forced postponement of the draw.

The action by the Association of Tennis Professionals threatened to reduce the world's No. 1 tennis tournament to a secondclass event.

Wimbledon's organizers, the All-England Lawn Tennis Club, said the draw scheduled for Wednesday morning would be postponed until Friday "to allow all concerned time to consider the situation. . . ."

More than 70 stars were involved in the boycott—over half the total entry in the men's singles. They included Stan Smith, the reigning champion from Pasadena, Calif., and 15 of the 16 seeds in the men's singles.

Only men players were affected. The women's singles will go on as planned.

The All-England Club, which runs Wimbledon, was faced with the problem of patching up its shattered tournament at short notice.

It appeared that the draw would have to be postponed and extra players brought in to fill the gaps.

Behind the Pilic dispute is growing resistance by the players to the dictates of their national associations.

Pilic, a contracted professional for six years who lived most of the time in the United States, was suspended by the Yugoslav Tennis Association because he refused to play for his country in the Davis Cup.

The International Lawn Tennis Federation confirmed the suspension. The All-England Club backed the ILTF and refused to accept Pilic's entry.

Supported by the ATP, Pilic put his case before a high court judge. He asked for injunctions against the ILTF and the All-England Club that in effect would have quashed his suspension in time for the big tournament.

Judge Sir Hugh Forbes, after legal arguments occupying three days, threw out the application Tuesday with the comment that courts should be slow to interfere with international matters.

The ATP, formed last year, has 97 members. Its president, Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, claimed more than 70 would join the boycott.

But some doubts began to form.

Players and fans waited to see which way Ilie Nastase of Romania, Smith's arch-rival and runner-up last year, would go.

Nastase was one of 71 players who pledged to withdraw from Wimbledon if Pilic was not allowed to compete. But Tuesday, after the judge's decision, he showed signs of wavering.

"I am in a terrible position," Nastase said. "I am a member of ATP, but when I left Romania a few days ago, I was told by my national association that I must play at Wimbledon. I just don't know what to do."

Drysdale told reporters the association would take disciplinary action against players who refused to join the boycott.

Must Death Sentence Await Errant Cougars?

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Why is death the automatic fate of any cougar venturing near what man considers to be his home territory? . . . Even park bears, which present a greater potential danger, are now drugged and moved to remote areas when they become a nuisance . . Air guns and tranquillizing darts are not new, so why the typical paranoid reaction of calling a "professional" cougar hunter to gun down a wandering animal? . . . How about utilizing some of those government funds now being employed in dead-end objectives to provide appropriate officials with animal control kits for their specific areas . . . It might be an idea to follow the old maxim of shooting only what we can use.

Mere Single Does It, By George

By The Associated Press

George Hendricks hit three home runs Tuesday night, but it was a ninth-inning single that made him the man of the hour after Cleveland Indians edged Detroit Tigers 8-7.

After Hendricks hit his 11th, 12th and 13th home runs in the first, fourth and sixth innings, the Indians were still trailing in the American League baseball game.

In the eighth, the Tigers turned cautious and walked him, but that move backfired when John Ellis hit a two-run homer to complete a Cleveland comeback that tied the game.

Then in the ninth John Brohamer and Buddy Bell walked to put the winning run in scoring position.

Hendricks lined a single and the Indians had their win.

In the rest of the American League games, Minnesota Twins squeezed into first place in the West Division with a 7-3 victory over Texas Rangers, California Angels knocked Chicago out of the top spot by beating the White Sox 3-1, Oakland Athletics pummeled Kansas City Royals 11-6, New York Yankees downed Baltimore Orioles 5-4 and, in a twi-night doubleheader, Boston Red Sox ended Milwaukee Brewers' 10 game winning streak with an 8-4 triumph, then made it a sweep by taking the 11-inning nightcap 4-1.

With one swing of the bat, Winston Llenas sent the White Sox out of the penthouse and saddled 14-game winner Wilbur Wood with his eighth defeat and fourth in a row.

The California pinch-hitter slugged his first major league homer, a three-run shot in the seventh inning, to provide Bill Singer with everything he needed to chalk up his 11th victory.

Sal Bando provided the Oakland power with a pair of homers, his 13th and 14th of the year. That's one less than he had all last season.

In the National League, they separated the men from the girls at Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, and it was a good thing for the Phillies.

Rosemary Lonborg was hit hard in the wives' game, but hubby Jim came along in the main attraction to serve up a four hitter and defeat the New York Mets 6-1. For the record, the Mets' wives crushed the Philadelphia "Fillies" 13-1.

In other National games, Montreal Expos whipped St. Louis Cardinals 3-1; Chicago Cubs beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the second, 4-3; Houston Astros trimmed San Diego Padres 7-3; Los Angeles Dodgers topped Atlanta Braves 3-0 and Cincinnati Reds blanked San Francisco Giants 4-0.

Mike Marshall provided late-inning relief for Steve Renko and knocked in a run to lead Montreal over St. Louis. Marshall came into the game in the eighth inning and gave up a run-scoring single to Joe Torre before preserving the Triumph for Renko, 6-3. It was Marshall's ninth save.

Leafs Sign Swedes

By The Canadian Press

Nobody could match Houston Aeros' snatch of Gordie Howe from the National Hockey League, but five other professional hockey clubs kept busy Tuesday signing five players and an assistant coach.

The assistant coach is Vic Stasiuk, hired by St. Louis Blues after being fired as head coach by three other National Hockey League clubs.

Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL signed Swedish players Borje Salming and Inge Hammarstrom while Pittsburgh Penguins got veteran right wing Lowell MacDonald's name on a three-year contract.

The Leafs signed the Swedish players after earlier announcing they had come to terms with defenceman Doug Marit, a 6-foot-3 graduate from Regina Pats.

Boston Bruins agreed to terms with centre Doug Gibson, their third choice in the draft who scored 52 goals and 114 points for Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Junior League.

Rookie Jimmy Jones moved to the World Hockey Association along with Howe, signing with Vancouver Blazers, while Vancouver Canucks of the NHL came to terms with Paulin Bordeleau.

Stasiuk, 44, was fired by the Canucks this spring after one year there. He coached California Golden Seals for one year and Philadelpria Flyers for two.

The Penguins said MacDonald, who scored 34 goals last season, was given a "considerable increase in pay."

Jones, 20, scored 37 goals and had 33 assists last year for Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. He signed a multi-year contract.

Bordeleau, the Canucks' second-round draft choice, last year had 54 goals and 43 assists for Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Selection followed weekend trials in Richmond.

As well, two Victoria athletes are still in the running for two of the remaining three berths on the 45-member B.C. squad, which is to be coached by Art Hutton of Vancouver.

Gail Gummer will compete in the pentathlon and Ian Campbell in the decathlon in trials in mid-July. One girl and two boys will be chosen.

Underwood's Clout Powers Royal Oak

Last year's batting champion in the Major Men's League, Underwood helped Royal Oak Sporting Goods to a 4-0 Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League victory over Mike's Sport Shop at Central Park.

He lashed out a solo home run in the first inning to open scoring and sacrificed winning - pitcher Gord Warren along with another run in the second frame.

Warren picked up the win by striking out seven batters, allowing only one walk and yielding three hits. He was never in serious trouble and only two rival runners managed to get as far as second base.

It was the second straight victory for fourth-place Royal Oak and the first loss in three starts for Mikes.

The other league game, originally scheduled for Heywood, was postponed earlier this week.

On Thursday, Mike's meets Century at Central while Seaboard Construction tackles Bell's Men's Wear at Heywood. Proceeds from both games will go to boost the injured player's fund, which has dwindled to $116.

The evening also will honor the memory of Fred "Stuffy" McGinnis. The late Victoria sportsman, who died 10 years ago Thursday, was instrumental in forming the Independent Athletic Association and formed leagues for hockey, softball and lacrosse players, bowlers and curlers.

Vicettes Break First-Place Tie

Miss Blackstock hurled a six-hitter, allowing no walks, as Vicettes defeated MacDonalds Furniture 8-1 at Hyacinth Park to snap a first-place deadlock with Stockers North Americans.

In Tuesday's other game, Heather Wood and Karen Thompson both belted home runs as CAV Electronics went on a five-run spree in the sixth inning to come from behind and beat Moose Lodge Loyals 7-4.

Salmonbellies Still Troubled

VANCOUVER — The sad story continued Tuesday night for the New Westminster Salmonbellies.

The defending Western Lacrosse Association and Canadian champions took their sixth loss in seven outings and their ninth of the season when Vancouver Burrards grabbed a 14-9 victory before 2,137 fans.

It was the fifth straight win over the Salmonbellies this season for the Burrards who got back into a first-place tie with Coquitlam Adanacs. The Adanacs had opened up a two-point lead over the Burrards by downing Victoria Shamrocks 20-17 in Coquitlam Monday night.

Paul Parnell of New Westminster was foiled in his bid to get the one goal he needs to reach the 800-mark but he did pick up two assists.

SKATER SIGNS LUCRATIVE CONTRACT

CHICAGO (AP) — Figure skater Janet Lynn signed a contract Tuesday which will make her one of the highest-paid athletes in the world.

Miss Lynn, 20, from Rockford, Ill., wrote her name on a three-year, $1,455,000 contract with the Ice Follies.

Miss Lynn finished second to Karen Magnusson of North Vancouver in the world figure skating championships in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, in March, Miss Magnusson turned professional about six weeks ago with Ice Capades.

Miss Lynn has won the United States figure skating title five straight times. International prizes, however, particularly a gold medal at the Olympics, have eluded her.

She said Tuesday she does not regret the absence of a gold medal from her amateur trophy shelf.

Meanwhile, in Wilmington, Del., Mark and Melissa Militano, who won the pairs title at the 1973 United States championships but fared poorly in the world and Olympic competition, have split up.

Mark, an innovative but temperamental teen-ager known for equating figure skating to ballet, was reported working as a sales clerk in Montana and looking for a job as a skating instructor.

CRICKET BRASS QUICK TO INVOKE COLOR BAN

LONDON (AP) — Cricket officials cracked down quickly Monday on the use of colored bats.

An official at Lords said: "Colored bats shall not be used in matches under the control of the Test and County Cricket Board . . ."

The spokesman added that the board has never sought to restrict players' equipment, but wants the chance to consider the implications of colored bats.

Gabriel's Leaving Clears Air

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Roman Gabriel era in Los Angeles has ended.

And most of his former teammates agree that the departure of the towering quarterback from North Carolina State is in the best interests of the Rams.

After the National Football League Rams had been decked 45-17 by Oakland Raiders last fall, Gabriel raised his throwing arm and pointed the ringer of guilt at some other Rams.

"He alienated some of the friendships he made on the team," says veteran guard Joe Scibelli. "I don't think it was right for Roman to single out other players and exempt himself."

The quarterback filed suit against the Rams' management, saying his multi-year contract with the club was void. The suit was subsequently dropped just before Gabriel was traded to Philadelphia Eagles.

Defensive tackle Merlin Olsen, Gabriel's former roommate, feels the rift between the quarterback and management occurred because of a b r e a k d o w n in communications.

"The problems could have been solved at one time," said Olsen, a 12-year veteran. "But, unfortunately, they weren't and time has a way of healing some problems and creating other problems in some cases. This was one case where the longer it went, the worse it got.

"Also Gabe felt that when they brought in quarterback John Hadl, it was their way of saying, 'We don't have confidence in you and we've found a quarterback who will take your place.' This wasn't entirely true, but not having had a chance to talk with them about it, he had to draw his own conclusion and that's the conclusion he drew."

Hadl was acquired from San Diego Chargers.

Other former team-mates assume that Gabriel fled to Philadelphia because Hadl represented a challenge for his job.

"I'm sorry to see a guy with the talent he had go crazy because of the acquisition of another player," said Jack Snow, the Rams' leading receiver last year. "I don't know his reasons for it, but I don't think it was fair on his part to act that way. It happens to other players at other positions all the time."

Reputation Damaged

HOUSTON (AP) — A. J. Foyt says he has received tougher inspections from some NASCAR officials since a 1971 Sports Illustrated article which he says misquoted him.

Foyt, who has won the Indianapolis 500 three times, testified this week in district court in his $1-million suit against Time Inc., publisher of the sports magazine.

Foyt says the magazine has damaged his reputation by attributing false statements to him.

The Houston race driver testified that some officials on the National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing circuit gave his car more stringent inspections than his competitors.

John Held of Houston, a lawyer for Time, said the magazine editors still believe that the quote attributed to Foyt is accurate.

After Foyt won the Miller 500 in Ontario, Calif., the magazine article quoted him as saying:

"Now that I've taken care of these hillbillies, I'm looking forward to beating those long-haired European fags."

Foyt said he did not make the statement and asked Sports Illustrated to print a retraction.

Mother Slays 2 Tots

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A pregnant mother of nine who was said to have resisted her family's attempts to put her in a mental home stabbed and decapitated two of her children Tuesday on her front lawn.

"I don't know what to do, but I think I'm losing my mind," screamed Mrs. Mary Anne Maloney, 38, as she plunged a knife into her two-month-old daughter Lisa, witnesses said.

A child ran screaming down the street shouting "she's cutting up the baby, she's cutting up the baby" as Mrs. Maloney returned to the house to get her one-year-old son, Russell, said Craig Dickey, 14.

Both had been stabbed repeatedly and were "severely mutilated," with their heads cut off and the boy's left arm severed, the coroner's office said.

When her husband, Kenneth, 43, arrived home to find the carnage, he shouted in anguish at onlookers "if anybody knows the agony of hell I do, I've put in my time in hell. I've tried to have that woman committed."

His oldest daughter, Debbie, 18, arrived shortly afterwards and had to be held away from him by police as she shouted "I told you to take her away long ago."

Rev. Charles Dail, who said he had been a neighbor of the Maloneys for 11 years, said he also tried to have Mrs. Maloney taken to a mental institution but all efforts had failed because the law required her consent.

Carbon Dioxide, Not Cold Killed Trapped Men: MDs

Times News Services

KEY WEST, Fla. — Carbon dioxide poisoning killed two men trapped in a research submarine about four hours before the vessel was raised from the ocean floor, doctors said early today.

The two, Clayton Link, 31, and Albert Stover, 51, were officially pronounced dead Tuesday morning. Extreme pressure prevented rescuers from opening the rear diving chamber of the civilian minisub Sea Link until decompression was completed about 10 p.m. Tuesday.

An autopsy was conducted at a nearby hospital and the cause of death was announced by the Monroe County medical examiner, Dr. A. F. Fernandez. He said the two died about noon Monday, shortly after losing consciousness.

Dr. David Youngblood, a physician with the Smithsonian Institution which sponsored the oceanographers, said the autopsy showed definitely that the men died of carbon dioxide poisoning and not of cold exposure as he had earlier predicted.

"Death was not abrupt; it came slowly," Youngblood said.

The victims could have swum out of the vessel but "it would have been tantamount to suicide," Youngblood said.

"They were so deep and had built up such a high decompression time" in the 21-foot sub that they would not have survived an escape attempt, he said.

Robert Meek, 27, and Archibald (Jock) Menzies, 30, two other crew members, survived the 31-hour ordeal in a forward chamber.

They were in seclusion at an undisclosed location.

As soon as the sub surfaced after being pulled loose by a grappling hook, rescuers began pumping a mixture of helium and oxygen into the rear chamber, but Link and Stover never moved.

A navy spokesman said opening the rear chamber, which was under pressure 12 times greater than on the surface, without decompression for almost 30 hours "would probably have blown them (Link and Stover) right out of there."

The Smithsonian said it planned to appoint a review board to determine the cause of the accident.

"I don't believe it was a pilot error (getting caught in the wreckage). I believe it was just Murphy's Law — if anything can go wrong it will do so at the worst possible time," another scientist said.

New Yablonski Arrest Near

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — The prosecutor in the Yablonski murders, which the government says were union-inspired and financed, says that at least one more arrest in the case is imminent.

Special prosecutor Richard Sprague commented Tuesday after a jury convicted Albert Pass, a former lieutenant of ousted United Mine Workers president W. A. Boyle, of first-degree murder in the killings.

Pass, 53, is the highest ranking former officer of the UMW charged thus far in the slayings.

He was found guilty on three murder counts, one each for the deaths of UMW insurgent Joseph Yablonski and his wife and daughter.

The three were shot to death by hired gunmen in bed in their home in Clarksville, Pa., Dec. 31, 1969, three weeks after Boyle defeated Yablonski in a bitter election for the UMW's presidency.

"There will be at least one more arrest," Sprague said. He refused to elaborate, but added: "It's obvious from the testimony in this case that someone in Washinton gave the green light to Mr. Pass."

REMAINS JAUNTY

Sprague had claimed previously in court that Boyle was the man behind the killings, but Boyle steadfastly has denied it.

While being led in handcuffs back to his cell afterward, he greeted news photographers with a jaunty smile. He had appeared confident throughout the trial.

Rayonier Appealing Controls

"The pollution troubled Rayonier pulp mill in Port Alice on northern Vancouver Island will appeal recent Pollution Control Branch regulations which it said would cost $40 million by 1978

The appeal will be heard by the Pollution Control Board, under chairman Walter Raudsepp, at the Victoria Law Courts building June 26, 27 29 and July 4.

The work force at the mill has been reduced by 70 with a reduction to five-day production instead of seven days to comply with regulations.

Rayonier will appeal two main points:

—An order that it install a recovery boiler by 1975 to remove organic pulp fibres from its waste before discharging it into Neroutsos Inlet;

—An order that by December, 1978, the mill treat all its other effluent, moving from Level C to Level B in pollution standards.

In its appeal notice, Rayonier said the controls are so stringent as to impose "undue social and economic hardships." Moving to Level B in pollution standards could be a crippling cost, it said.

The company said the controls do not strike "a proper balance between the right of the general public to enjoy a reasonably undisturbed environment on the one hand, and right of those other segments of the public who use it judiciously for proper production processes."

It also says the age (over 50 years) and location of the mill and the character of Neurotsos Inlet were not taken into account.

Witness Talks Planned

The third largest convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in North America this summer—the Divine Victory International Assembly in Vancouver—is being organized by a Victoria man.

Clare Statton of 1026 Carberry St. has been in Vancouver for the past month preparing for the 60,000 expected to attend the five-day convention, which starts July 4.

"This convention is actually a mammoth family reunion," said Statton.

"We have people coming from over 50 countries, looking forward to the assembly sessions as well as visiting relatives and friends," he said.

Some 1,500 Witnesses from Greater Victoria, Sooke and Sidney will be there.

MM Group Eyes a New Party

The Majority Movement hopes to defeat the New Democratic Party government in British Columbia through a political union of free enterprise people, a spokesman for the organization said in Victoria today.

Vancouver lawyer John McDonald told a meeting of Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce at the Empress hotel the new organization favored a coalition of people rather than a coalition of parties.

Policy would be decided at the first convention of the movement next spring, but he said, he was sure the organization would look with favor upon the formation of a new political force, the United Party of British Columbia.

He said if sitting MLAs and prominent candidates supporting the Majority Movement wish to seek office next election as UP candadates "this could occur with overwhelming support from the movement."

He specifically ruled out the possibility of a coalition of existing parties.

"The Majority Movement at present believes that party coalition is impossible, if indeed it is desirable. B. C. had an unpleasant experience with coalition government prior to 1952 and what failed before is likely to fail again," he said.

He said some kind of trade-off was possible between existing political parties but it had limited appeal.

Under a trade-off, each party would agree not to run a candidate in ridings it considers hopless in excahnge for an equal number of similar agreements by the other opposition parties.

He stressed that the final decision on the policy of the Majority Movment would be made at its spring convention.

McDonald, 50, was a Progressive Conservative candidate in the 1972 federal election. He was defeated by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

The Majority Movement was formed as an amalgamation of independent groups including the Stamp Out Socialism organization in Kamloops. Jar Whist and Kenneth Mair of the SOS group are active members of the Majority Movement.

In Vancouver, lawyers McDonald of West Vancouver and Arnold Hean of Burnaby are prominent along with former Vancouver alderman Frank Bernard, Paul Oborne, John Campbell, Donald Tyerman, Brian Tracy and June Alston.

McDonald said the movment had no organized backing other than its members and no finances other than membership fees and donations.

There are only two paid staff members with all other members paying their own expenses, he said.

Meanwhile, a Victoria committee of businessmen opposed to the NDP government plans a meeting next week to discuss McDonald's speech.

The committee will consider whether it should join the Majority Movement.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two Victoria drivers will spend next weekend in jail as a result of a new policy initiated Tuesday by Judge Harold Alder in provincial court.

Carman Randazzo, 34, of 15 Lotus, pleaded guilty to charges of impaired driving, dangerous driving and driving without a licence April 28 on Government Street.

The weekend jail term, from 9 a.m. Friday to 9 p.m. Sunday, was imposed for driving without a licence. Randazzo told the court he had been driving for 12 years and never had a licence.

Randazzo was fined a total of $600 on the other two charges.

James Frederick Bligh, 18, of 2524 Dowler Place, was given two concurrent weekend terms for driving while under suspension and failing to remain at the scene of an accident May 4.

On an additional charge of driving without insurance, Bligh was fined $250.

Franc Gmajner, 38, of 945 Russell, was fined $350 for impaired driving on Hillside Ave. April 21.

Gmajner's licence was suspended for three months.

A Victoria housewife was fined $400 after she pleaded guilty to shoplifting $2.45 worth of goods from a Foul Bay Road store May 29.

The charge was a second shoplifting offence for Lorraine Butcher, 50, of 3148 Westdowne Road.

Sharon Ann Materi, 26, of Courtenay, was given a jail term of four months followed by two years probation after she pleaded guilty to cashing 23 bad cheques in Victoria and Vancouver.

The cheques were worth $765.

Judge William Ostler said her troubles were connected with heroin use and a man "who is bad for you."

"He lets you cash the cheques, get the money and get in trouble, and then he walks out on you."

★ ★ ★

Charles H. Harrison, 79, of 657 Langford, was given a suspended sentence and a six-month probation term for opening letters which did not belong to him.

Harrison told the court he opened the letters hoping to find a forwarding address.

Judge Ostler said any interference with the mail was a serious offence, "but I think that he felt, in his confused way, that he was performing a service."

Michall Shearer, 28, of the Salvation Army Hospital, was fined $200 for stealing a carton cigarettes from The Bay on Monday.

PREGNANT PAUSE

CAGLIARI, Italy (AP) — Police reported Monday that a Sardinian woman, who must serve two months in jail convicted of embezzlement, will avoid jail once again — as she did in the last three years through her 10th pregnancy.

Elena Sainas, 29, who has nine children, filed to a local magistrate a document proving she is pregnant and asking law benefits provided for pregnant women.

Under Italian law women convicted for minor crimes cannot be jailed while pregnant and for six months after the birth of the baby.

Through her eighth and ninth pregnancies Mrs. Sainas had avoided arrest. The law benefits granted for the birth of the ninth baby expired last month.

For avoiding arrest Mrs. Sainas followed the examples first given by a woman in Naples who escaped jail for nine years through continuous pregnancies.

Gang Guns Group

BOGOTA, Colombia (Reuter) — A group of businessmen driving on the main road north from the Colombian capital of Bogota was flagged down by what looked like a military patrol.

The 30 men stepped out of their cars. Four were machine-gunned to death, and 10 others seriously wounded.

The "military checkpoint" was manned by gangsters dressed as soldiers.

The May incident was the latest in a series of Mafia-style killings connected with Colombia's multi-million-dollar emerald industry, which police sources say accounted for an estimated 500 murders last year alone.

Police later arrested a number of the survivors.

TAKEOVER FLOPS

Three years ago, the state took over Colombia's two most famous mines, Muzo and Coscuez, but after a series of disasters it intends to sell them back to private enterprise.

Despite the rich deposits of high-quality stones at Muzo and Coscuez, the state's share of the export market plummeted to a fraction. And during the state's tenure, 15 employees were murdered.

"The state is pulling out because the mines are too hot to handle," the observer commented.

Boyaco has colossal untapped reserves of emeralds, and legal exports of stones found in the region are expected to reach a record $60 million this year.

IN GANG'S GRIP

They run protection-racket syndicates. Unless a prospector has pre-paid his "subscription," if word gets around that he has found a good stone the chances are that he will lose either it or his life.

The Guaquero have also penetrated the isolated miners' camps. They have large cash reserves and can frequently persuade miners to smuggle out stones for a generous payoff.

"The Guaquero make normal business deals lethal and nearly impossible," one state official said.

Future Need 'Ignored'

VANCOUVER (CP) — School trustee Peter Westlake said Monday that alternative education schemes seem to cater exclusively to what students want now and ignore what society might need in the future.

He told a school board meeting he believes too much attention is paid to the immediate happiness of students and not enough to skills Canada will need in 10 or 20 years.

But his remarks failed to stop the board from approving a recommendation to support alternative schools on an interim basis. Trustees approved financial support to five different alternative projects, subject to negotiations between the board and the British Columbia education department.

Exercise Lack, Headache Pills Slammed

VANCOUVER (CP)—Doctors have taken a wide-ranging look at some of their patients' problems and concluded they need more physical exercise, should be more aware of the need for genetic counselling and possibly should cut down on the use of headache tablets containing acetylsalicylic acid.

The conclusions were voiced in speeches and panel discussions before about 1,100 doctors Tuesday at the continuing joint meeting of the Canadian and British Medical Associations.

The need for physical exercise was voiced as a result of a survey of the physical fitness of Canadians — it's awful — with other subjects applying to patients everywhere.

Dr. Clarke Fraser, medical genetics professor at McGill University in Montreal, said about 25 to 30 per cent of all admissions to children's hospitals are for conditions that are passed from one generation to another in the genes that determine family characteristics.

Doctors could help prevent many diseases, such as muscular dystrophy, that are passed from parents to children by ensuring that the patients and members of their families — even cousins — know about genetic counselling.

Dr. Fraser said he still sees too many patients who have had deformed or diseased children because of inherited factors who ask: "Why didn't somebody tell me?"

A panel of experts on treatment of ulcers voiced differing views about the use of preparations containing acetysalicylic acid or ASA, the common ingredient in most headache tablets.

Panel Chairman Dr. J. C. Harrison of Vancouver said ASA is one of the great socio-medical problems of the day and that far too many people use far too much of it indiscriminately.

But Dr. John Loewenthal, a kidney and stomach specialist from the University of Sydney, Australia, said he was "staggered by how good a drug" ASA is.

He said something like 10 millions tons of it has been used by the western world "and the incidence of kidney and stomach disorders from it are minimal."

Dr. Loewenthal agreed misuse of the drug, such as taking large doses every day, should be prevented. But he said it's wise use was necessary in treating most common ailments.

Dr. Harrison said he considered anyone taking two ASA tablets a day every day is a drug addict and said this common everyday use of drugs should be stopped.

Seagram Bid Scotched

VANCOUVER (CP)—An executive of Seagram's Distillery said Tuesday the provincial government has turned down a request that the Liquor Control Board begin restocking Seagram's products. Executive vice-president Melvin Griffin said the company made the request at a meeting with Industrial Development Minister Gary Lauk.

"I don't think we can get any help from this government," he said.

Griffin said the only way to settle the dispute between Seagram's and the striking Distillery Workers' Union would be to place the company's latest offer before the employees of Seagram's plant at New Westminster and "let them decide."

Lauk said after the meeting that possible closure of the New Westminster distillery by the company was discussed.

The minister said the government still has no intention of taking over the strike-bound operation as requested by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Seagram's products have been off liquor store shelves in B.C. as a result of the dispute. Members of the union in New Westminster and Vancouver have been on strike for three months.

Stocks of Seagram's products gradually disappeared from liquor store shelves because replacement stock was not available from the struck distillery and the Liquor Control Board steered clear of getting involved in the dispute by bringing in supplies from Seagram's plants outside the province.

WATER COSTS SOAR IN KELOWNA AREA

KELOWNA (CP) — The annual cost of water for farmers belonging to an irrigation board here has jumped to $38 an acre from $22 and threatens to go above $60 next year, said a member of the district irrigation board.

Members of the South East Irrigation District, expecting to make a profit on real estate subdivision before the land freeze late last year, installed a $4.5 million system of underground pipe designed to cover 4,330 acres along the east edge of this town.

Growers Urge Fixed Prices

KELOWNA (CP) — The British Columbia legislature's agriculture committee heard in the 2½ years ended in mid-grower and consumer.

The United Fruitgrowers of B.C., a minority grower organization, said the $31 million fruit industry should be controlled by a 12-member com-complaints Tuesday from present three-man fruit board and grower-owned central selling firm.

Hans Rhenisch, chairman of the UFBC and a Keremeos-area grower, claimed the UFBC represents more than 100 growers who produce more than 1.2 million boxes of fruit annually.

He said the proposed commission should set a minimum price to growers and a fixed price for fruit sold to consumers. B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd. — the fresh marketing arm of the industry — no longer would have the sole power to sell and distribute fruit.

Rhenisch said apple production in Washington state has doubled in recent years while B.C. has seen a reduction to just over four million boxes from six million.

Walter Stubbe, a consumer spokesman, said it costs an average of $2.57 to pack a box of apples yet the package was discarded at the retail level and the fruit placed in bulk display bins.

Fishermen Set Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations on three separate contracts within the British Columbia fishing industry continued Tuesday, with a July 6 strike deadline announced by both tendermen and shore workers.

The third group of workers, the Salmon Net Fishermen, will meet Friday with their employers. They have not taken a strike vote.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain loading aboard the Hong Kong-based freighter Ceram Sea was halted Tuesday by a picket line of the ship's crew. They alleged brutality by RCMP during a search of the ship Monday.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

OSOYOOS (CP) — An early cherry crop has produced a shortage of pickers as students are not yet out of school.

SOME DISEASES STILL SEXIST

VANCOUVER (CP)—Now that a woman has been named to the top office of the Canadian Medical Association and about 20 per cent of all medical students are women, you'd think there would be equality in medicine.

But nobody can explain the sexist diseases.

During Tuesday's sessions of the CMA meeting here, speaker after speaker reported on the preference of one or another disease for males or for females.

Few diseases, it appears, believe in equality of the sexes. Tuesday's summing up from the various presentations:

—Duodenal ulcers are four times more common in men and gastric (stomach) ulcers are twice as common in men.

—Hyperthyroidism (a condition when the thyroid gland in the neck produces too much of its hormone) favors women about eight-to-one.

—Strokes are found about three times as often in men.

TORIES WON ON RECORD

HAMBURG, West Germany — The high-priced call girl implicated in Britain's recent sex scandal says she voted for the Conservatives in the last election "because they were my best clients."

The woman, Norma Levy, was interviewed by Stern magazine at St. Topez on the most chic stretch of the French Riviera. She is staying there with her husband Colin.

N. Viets Expand Air Strips

Times News Services

The North Vietnamese are building five air bases in Communist-held areas of South Vietnam which could be used for military operations, Pentagon officials said today.

The Communists are justifying the bases as civilian airstrips but apparently are equipping them for military transport flights and — potentially — jet fighter operations, the U.S. officials say.

Military sources in South Vietnam have reported at least nine Communist airfields under construction in South Vietnam since the cease-fire, with six of them ready for use. This is a higher number than Pentagon officials acknowledge.

On the truce front, Communist violations dropped today to the lowest point in three weeks, the Saigon command said, but it reported heavy fighting at four scattered points throughout the country that killed 67 Vietnamese.

Later Pickup

Garbage collection in Saanich commercial areas should start later to avoid early morning racket, public works committee recommended Tuesday.

It recommended to council that pickups be allowed from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., except Sunday and statutory holidays, in commercial, service-commercial, industrial, institutional and public utility districts.

In all other districts the hours should be 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The subject arose when a private garbage contractor, Cypress Disposal Ltd., became concerned it might be breaking the law by collecting before 6 a.m. Saanich had received complaints from persons regularly awakened by the noise at such places as McDonald's restaurant and University Heights shopping centre.

The committee had previously thought the Noise Suppression Bylaw applied, but solicitor Douglas Patterson later agreed with Robert Heath, counsel for Cypress, that a 7 a.m. starting time in the bylaw applied only to construction and demolition noise.

Olympic Bid Supported

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council gave cautious approval Tuesday to a committee recommendation that the city back a bid to bring the 1980 Winter Olympic Games to the Vancouver area.

Basically, council support hinges on hopes the British Columbia government is willing to speed development of a sewer system in Garibaldi area, north of here up Howe Sound.

Development of hotels and housing in the Garibaldi area has been stalled because of the pollution problems a large development could bring.

Because the B.C. government has been cool to the proposal, council agreed the plan will be dropped unless government co-operation is offered.

CITY ARTIST DIES ABROAD

Ciccimara, who died Sunday, was born in Austria, moving to the Barbados and London after the Second World War. As an artist he was mainly self-taught because the war started when he was about to enter art school.

He held his first important exhibition in London. Ciccimarra moved to Victoria and during the 1950s gained a reputation as a talented and original artist.

Local recognition of his talents came last January when city council made him an honorary citizen.

The West meets the East with this oriental-flavoured salad. This could be the start of a Far-East theme for summer entertaining. Select several other Chinese dishes, then "go Oriental" on table setting ideas . . . it has some great far-reaching possibilities!

1 cup regular raw white rice
2 cups cooked diced chicken
½ cup thinly sliced celery
¼ cup chopped green onions
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup plain yogurt
½ cup French dressing
¼ cup lemon juice
1 (10-ounce) can mandarin oranges, drained
½ cup toasted slivered almonds

Cook rice according to package directions; drain throughly. Add chicken, celery, onions and salt. Combine yogurt, French dressing and lemon juice. Pour over salad and toss lightly. Chill well. Just before serving add mandarin oranges and almonds; toss lightly. Serve on crisp greens. Makes 6 servings.

Melody in the Streets Means Dinner for Two

By HELEN MELNYK

Some passersby hurry by but many stop a moment to listen and drop a few coins into the open case.

Come rain or shine these two young street players set themselves up on their corners to earn their daily bread with their music.

Twenty-six-year-old Bruce Mason found he could make more strumming his banjo than by the odd summer jobs he managed to land. It takes him 3 to 4 hours to earn his daily quota of $10. That averages out to the minimum wage of $2 per hour.

"Of course it all depends on the weather," Mason said. "On rainy days I sometimes get only a quarter in an hour. In nice weather, when people are more leisurely and relaxed, they stop to listen."

On a particularly good day he earned $20, he said.

His earnings take care of Mason's simple needs; his only extravagance being the banjo and his three dogs.

Prior to his banjo picking days, Mason was an English graduate student at Simon Fraser University. He put himself through school each year by taking a summer job at a plywood mill. But he found that the only qualifications all his book learning gave him was to work at the same old job.

So he turned his attention to a banjo gathering dust in a closet and travelled around the U.S. to hear bluegrass musicians. After two years of self-tuition, Mason decided to try his luck as street musician.

He says that the experience has taught him far more about life and people than all his university.

"I just assumed that they would be down on this kind of thing. But they are really interesting to talk to. They say they like the 'cheerful noise.'"

He also found people to be a lot friendlier than he gave them credit for.

People come back and talk to him every day, Mason said. He's made a lot of friends here. Passersby often stop to invite him for coffee. They consider him a character. Only a handful have a nasty word to say, like the man who calls him "Mr. Ambition."

People enjoy his tunes because very few have the opportunity to hear live music nowadays, Mason said.

"The theatrical and personal aspects of music are lost when recorded. On TV and stereo sets, it comes out sounding mechanical. Here I make up the melody as I go along and make the odd mistake. It's never the same."

Down the street his competitor, Dave McQuillan, 19, was happily counting up the $6.13 he made in two hours that morning. He came to Victoria from Vancouver because there was too much competition from other players."

Neither player considers himself a beggar living on handouts. They feel that the enjoyment they give people is valid work.

MALE HELD SUPREME

TORONTO (CP) — Fear not men! There's a woman fighting for the cause of male supremacy. And she is attracting quite a throng of supporters from the ranks of her sex.

"I will always acknowledge male supremacy; I will always be grateful for what my man has gifted me with — whether it is children, a home or simply the pleasure of his presence," said Betty Jan Jarboe, a San Francisco mother and president of the Anti-Women's Liberation League.

The group, which boasts a membership of 15,000, views the women's liberation movement as a threat to the family unit and a force which might eventually produce laws that stifle individual freedom.

Mrs. Jarboe, who prefers to be known by her nickname J. J., has committed herself to "bringing health, happiness and contentment into the life of my mate."

"My husband is the head of the house and if he ordered me to stay home, I'd do it," she said during a visit here.

Family Hooked on Dope

VANCOUVER (CP) — To outsiders, the McDonalds are just another ordinary family living in the Kitsilano district of Vancouver.

Except that Mrs. McDonald, 52, a plump matronly woman, has four children, all of whom are on drugs.

Her 12-year-old daughter Jean is smoking marijuana and hashish; her 18-year-old daughter Mary is now into cocaine and her two sons, Blair, 22, and Robert, 21, are dealing in heroin to support their $210-a-day habits.

Visiting the McDonalds is a startling experience, not because of the enormity of the problem but because of the air of normalcy about the house.

Jean is a bouncy 12-year-old who thinks hard drugs are "just plain dumb." Mary, a blooming young woman with all the rebelliousness of her age, says she won't get into hard drugs, "But coke's (cocaine) no big hassle." And the boys appear personable young men of high intelligence. There's nothing sinister about them.

"I don't know how I cope," said Mrs. McDonald in desperation. "Sometimes I think it would be best to throw the boys out, but I think I can be of some help if I let them stay here—it's something I must face."

Police say there are 5,000 heroin users in Vancouver. The McDonalds think there are at least twice that number, not to mention the thousands of cocaine users or people dropping acid, MDA, THC, mescaline and psilocybin.

Vancouver is Canada's junk (heroin) town. The city's 5,000 official users compare with Toronto's 3,000 and Montreal's 1,000. Halifax has a mere 100, Winnipeg 350, Edmonton 900, and Calgary 500 — according to authorities.

That's the official perspective, which the McDonalds feel has little bearing on reality.

"The trouble with junk," said Robert, who first got into it six years ago, "is that it is illegal."

Robert said that if junk were legal addicts could support habits at $50 a year. "That a lot less than cigarettes," he said.

"Yeah," said Mary, sitting with the rest of the family in the living room. "I pay about $250 a year for cigarettes."

In the last few weeks, big problems have developed in Vancouver's heroin community. A police crackdown has driven the price of junk from its old stable price of $15 a cap to $30 a cap.

Flo Chadwick at stockbroker's desk

Champion Retires Swimsuit

elizabeth forbes

Although it's almost 20 years since Florence Chadwick made her gallant attempt to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca, I'm certain there are many in this city who remember her with affection and interest.

That's why I'd like to bring you up-to-date on her recent activities.

Believe it or not, she has hung up her swim suit and has turned to a completely new career. She is now a stock-broker with F. I. duPont, Glore Forgan and Company in San Diego, the city where she was born.

On top of that, a new honor came to her a short while ago, when she was named an international honorary member of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The citation in this instance read "as one who has been faithful in the pursuit of high ideals ... contributed significantly to society ... and has served as an inspiration to Beta Sigma Phis around the world."

Flo Chadwick started to swim when she was five years old. I remember her telling me how it happened, when she was in training here for the Juan de Fuca swim.

She and her mother, Mary Chadwick, were coming out of church one Sunday when they met a friend who was starting a swimming class the next morning.

She needed pupils. The lessons were only 50 cents a week. So it was decided Flo would join the class.

A year later, a "tubby" six-year-old, with "a big tummy" as Florence Chadwick told it, took part in the San Diego city championships.

She was so conscious of that "tummy", she could hardly get her dressing gown off. On top of that, she came in last.

A year later she swam in the race again, that time making it second from last. The next year she won the event.

When she was nine years old Flo began to think of rough water swimming. So, she gave up the pool and headed for the sea.

The Chadwicks lived close to a San Diego bay. And, from then on, she was down there every morning at dawn. "Mom" Chadwick watched from the shore, got her out of the water after a good work out, home for breakfast and off to school.

That self-training paid off. At 10, Flo was the first child to swim the San Diego Bay Channel. By age 11, she had won two trophies; and during the next 18 years, she won the annual two-and-a-half mile rough water swim at La Jolla, California, 10 times.

During the Second World War, she directed and produced aquatic shows for various military service groups and veterans' hospitals.

Then, in 1945, she gave up her amateur standing when she appeared in a motion picture starring Esther Williams and in which she did all the ballet routines.

Everything she did was slanted toward accomplishing success or bettering feats in rough water. Even to working for two years with a big oil company in Arabia in order to finance her first English Channel swim.

That came on August 8, 1950, when she established a new speed record of 13 hours and 20 minutes.

During the fabulous decade that followed, Miss Chadwick made 15 subsequent record-breaking swims. She took the English Channel four times, three from England to France, the so-called hard way. She swam the eight-mile strait of Gibraltar from Europe to Africa, breaking all records. And she made the first official swim of the Bosporus Strait, establishing the first record.

In 1952 she became the first woman to swim the 21 miles from Catalina Island to California.

It was the Strait of Juan de Fuca with its deceptive currents and tide rips that broke her record-breaking streak.

Shortly after that Miss Chadwick became aquatic director for a resort in the Catskills. Then, for several years, she operated swimming schools in a Manhattan Hotel and in Fort Lee, New Jersey.

She does volunteer work with such groups as The Lighthouse (for blind children), heart fund, boys and girls Scouts, senior citizens, YWCA and church groups.

Most of her trophies are now on display in the Hall of Champions in San Diego's Balboa Park.

And her swimming prowess is recorded for all time in the International Swimming Hall of Fame, into which she was inducted in 1970.

Music Calms Pupils

HALIFAX (CP) — An elementary school principal says that quiet background music filtering through the school has brought a more relaxed atmosphere into the classroom.

Winston Hendsbee says that low-volume music piped into the 13 classrooms and hallways at his school in nearby Westphal created an atmosphere more conducive to communication and learning.

"Students were living with an almost constant threshold of music while they were out of school," he said. "The constrasting silence of the classroom tended to create a tension — an inhibiting factor to communication between the teacher and student."

The principal said teachers were polled before the system was installed last November and, while some expressed doubts, they all agreed it should be tried. Now, they agreed it has been a success.

"Some teachers even tell me they appreciate the subtle masking effect the music has on everyday classroom noises such as dropped pencils, scraping chairs and turning pages — none of which are pleasant to listen to."

dear abby

For X-Rated Eyes

DEAR ABBY: Since this is anything but complimentary to women I'm sure you won't print it, but I'll write anyway.

When an X-rated movie comes to town, the women flock to see it in droves. Many come by themselves. I'm not referring to just mildly pornographic films, I'm talking about the really rough ones which leave nothing to the imagination.

I've attended such movies and I notice the women's reactions are no different than the men's. Occasionally someone will walk out before the end of the film, but strangely enough, it's the women who usually stay until the very end. How do you feel about such movies?

I have always heard and read that women are not turned on by the visual the way men are. If that's true, what are they doing there?

Care to comment? — Made My Point.

DEAR MADE: So you've made your point; the point being that you suspect that women are just as "turned on" by the visual as the men are. Could be. But most people flock to X-rated movies (at least once) because they are curious — not necessarily because they want to be "turned on." And if the morals squad would just ignore them instead of staging raids, confiscating film, and arresting exhibitors and patrons, thereby giving these trashy movies millions of dollars worth of free advertising in the press, they would die a slow death.

DEAR ABBY: My husband took me to a company party where there was an orchestra for dancing. We didn't even have one dance when my husband left me, saying he'd be back in a minute. Not five minutes later I saw him out on the floor dancing with a girl. I just sat there alone and waited for him.

After what seemed like forever my husband came back and said one of the executives asked him to please dance with his wife because he (the executive) wanted to dance with his secretary and he didn't want to leave his wife sitting alone.

Abby, I love to dance, and my husband is a marvelous dancer, and there have been very few occasions where we have been able to dance, and I was really hurt.

During the evening my husband left me three times to ask that same lady to dance, so her husband could dance with his secretary. The secretary had a husband somewhere, but he never asked me to dance.

I told my husband when we got home I was humiliated and hurt and he said I was the only woman alive who would react that way. Am I? — Odd Woman Out.

DEAR ODD: Not while I'm alive.

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man check up on his wife to be sure he knows exactly where she is every minute? Do you think he suspects that she's playing around? — Curious.

DEAR CURIOUS: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to know where she is while he's playing around.

By HARRIET HART

If you want some expert advice for creating a movie you and others will enjoy again and again, study the eight-page booklet "Making An Outdoor Movie."

This booklet gives several examples of what kind of events you may want to film, such as a picnic, the building of a snowman or a family outing to the beach. Since many people become self-conscious and freeze when they know they are being filmed, try to shoot when they are engrossed in some activity.

According to this publication, one of the worst faults of most home movies is the lack of sufficient close-ups. Close-ups are fascinating and visually impressive and they can be taken even with inexpensive equipment.

Also important is to vary not only the distance between camera and subject but also the length of the individual scenes which, linked together, will later make your movie.

Beginners at film making should find this publication particularly helpful, but even experienced home movie fans will benefit from it.

Where does a wrinkle come from?

You've seen pictures of desert lakes. Dry land with cracks all over it. The cracks are there because there's no moisture under the ground. That's the way it is with a wrinkle. When the tiny cells under your skin dry out, the cells shrink. And outside, on your skin, a wrinkle appears. Sooner or later it happens to everybody.

If you could get something to put pure, fresh moisture back into those cells, your wrinkles would fade. Even disappear. Now you can get that something at better drug and department stores. It's called 2nd Debut, a specially formulated beauty discovery that's been proven to make wrinkles fade, even disappear. Applied twice daily, 2nd Debut, with CEF 600 or CEF 1200, will actually begin to smooth out ugly wrinkles. At drug and cosmetic counters.

Eligible Females More Independent

NEW YORK (AP) — They are beautiful, bright and welloff. Handsome bachelors pursue them; fashion magazines photograph them; the society columns chat about them.

But these sought-after females of the '70s are different from the post-debs of the past who played with Daddy's money until Mr. Millionaire Right came along.

They still fly to London and Rome, but now it's probably on business. High-fashion clothes still hang in the closet, but they don't get used as much as the blue jeans. The last visit to the beauty parlor might have been weeks ago — just for a haircut.

There are dozens of such women. Looks or family name and wealth may have brought them into the social scene, but the things they do, their varied interests and their views on men, money and life ambitions reflect on independence unmatched by the eligibles of the last decade.

Mazie Cox, 27, is typical of the new-single woman. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cox, a Social Register family. Her brother Ed is married to Tricia Nixon.

"My parents encouraged me to have as many different life experiences as possible, to establish my own life," said Mazie.

"I was never under any pressure to get married. And having a career is a very natural thing for me."

A former debutante of the year who was featured as a model in top fashion magazines, Mazie is a graduate of the Yale School of Architecture. She is involved in New York's Madison Avenue mall project.

Berry Berenson, 25, is a professional photographer whose pictures have appeared in several fashion magazines. She and her model-actress sister, Marisa Berenson, daughters of an American diplomat married to a Schiaparelli of fashion fame, grew up in Europe. Berry said she got no money from her family when she embarked on her career in London.

"That was good, because you have to work a lot harder, especially when your family has a reputation," she said.

Several months ago, Halston, the designer, gave a brthday for her and others which was attended by many movie and art world stars.

"That was the last big thing I went to," she said. "I just don't like seeing the same people a hundred times."

Former Olympic skier Suzy Chaffee, 26, is involved in so many activities there's little time for dating.

As a founder of the World Sports Foundation and a member of the United States Olympic Committee, she is busy enlisting government aid for amateur athletes. She is a television sports commentator, a sometime model, designer and skiing film star.

Her interest in meditation, mind control and physical development resulted in an invitation to teach a course on sexuality and sports at the Esalen Institute this summer. In the winter she is the director of creative skiing at Mount Snow.

Maureen Kane Dean

Honeymoon Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The honeymoon was short for Maureen Kane Dean. The last few months of Watergate crises following her October marriage to John Dean have been horrendous, she says.

"But maybe we'll be able to relax a bit when this . . . is over," Mrs. Dean said in a doorstep interview at her home.

"This" is the scandal over the Watergate conspiracy and cover-up in which her husband is alleged to have played a major role.

Mrs. Dean said she will accompany the ousted White House counsel when he tells his version of the conspiracy to the Senate Watergate committee next Monday.

"You can bet I'll be there," said the handsome blonde, who is Dean's second wife. He is divorced from his first wife.

President Nixon fired Dean April 30. Leaked accounts of the 34-year-old lawyer's story, told so far behind closed doors, indicate that he is likely to implicate Nixon in the Watergate cover-up.

Mrs. Dean has been a prisoner in her own home. Television crews have camped on her townhouse doorstep, sometimes around the clock, knocking on the front door until midnight and catching her again when she appears to collect the morning newspaper.

Mrs. Dean, who appears to be in her early 30s, was calm and soft-spoken on what was to have been the eve of her husband's televised Senate Watergate committee debut. The hearings later were postponed for a week because of tht state visit of Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Meal Without Meat Still Offers Protein

By HILDA BEASTALL

A meatless meal yet one with high protein value is a combination of mushrooms with Canadian cheddar cheese and brown rice. This can be prepared entirely on top of the stove, or finished off in the oven. As given, amounts are for two servings or a complete meal for one, with the suggested salad, or a serving of cooked carrots and peas.

The amounts of ingredients are not critical. The one medium egg and one cup of milk will take care of more or less of the other items. Brown rice is cooked ahead of time, for it keeps in the refrigerator when covered, for three days.

MUSHROOM-CHEESE LUNCH OR SUPPER

1 c. milk, made with skim milk powder
1 c. cooked brown rice
a little salt, and a shake of curry powder
1 medium egg
1 Tbsp margarine
1 c. (loosely filled) grated cheddar cheese

Simmer mushrooms gently in milk for 5 minutes, add cooked brown rice and mix. Add egg, beat gently with a fork, and stir in margarine and seasonings. Heat through again, using gentle heat just to boiling point. Add grated cheese and mix well without boiling.

If the dish is to be finished in oven, pour heated mixture into a small casserole before adding the grated cheese, which is spread on top to melt and brown slightly in a 350 deg. oven 15 mins.

This is a versatile dish. As given above, baked or not, it makes a fine meal with a salad of grated carrot, grated red radishes, with a touch of raw onion or chive stems, with a simple dressing of plain yogurt with a tablespoon of light raisins mixed in.

Mushrooms are good food for adding to other known protein foods, for as well as some protein, mushrooms add other vitamins. Besides all this, the delicate mushroom flavor goes well with brown rice and egg. Fresh ones need only wiping with a damp clean cloth (or quickly washing in a strainer if you like). No peeling is necessary. The brown ones have more flavor I am sure.

Radishes are surprisingly high in vitamins, though we don't normally eat many at one meal. Grind as with raw carrots, for immediate use. They add a change of flavors to a limited diet.

The price of dark raisins has gone beyond what I call reasonable limits — to 69 cents or so for a pound. However, I now am buying currants at 39 cents a pound and sultana raisins at 37 cents.

I feel both are good substitutes for use in baked desserts in place of sugar and in yogurt dressing for vegetable and fruit salads.

Shelled nuts are another food to watch when buying. Look for the raw kinds — unroasted and unsalted. Broken pieces are less costly than perfect halves or wholes, and you'll likely put them through a chopper anyway.

Nutritious meals are what you put into them. And what you put in depends on both your ability as a gardener and on ferreting out the best available.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Better Patient Betters Treatment

That friendly and able physician, Dr. William Nolen, recently wrote an article (Today's Health, April, 1973), containing some rules to make a person a better patient, and this information is often much needed.

During my lifetime in medicine, hundreds of times I have marveled at the fact that the person who came to consult me said that he had been to a dozen doctors and clinics and had gotten no help. Why had he gotten no help? Because he had either failed to tell the doctors the important facts about his illness or he had failed to answer their questions honestly.

Hundreds of times, in trying to find out whether or not a certain symptom was psychically or nervously produced, I have asked a patient if there was any severe neurosis or epilepsy in any close member of his family, and he has said, "absolutely not."

Many and many times I got an honest answer only after I had made friends with the patient for 10 days. It was because of this refusal or failure to tell the story properly that he had not gotten help before.

Nolen tells how so often a woman will lie to him about how long she has known about a lump in her breast. She will say she discovered it two or three days before, when in reality she has known about it for several months. The danger of her lying is that if the lump has grown virtually overnight, it is most probably a cyst, but if it has grown steadily for six months, it will be necessary to schedule surgery immediately.

I have known of patients who lied about bleeding from the rectum, not mentioning it to their doctor until it was too late to save them from a cancer of the rectum that has spread to other organs of the body. Also, as Dr. Nolen says, patients consistently lie about how much they drink or smoke; I had one woman patient who had been from clinic to clinic, complaining about a bad diarrhea,, and it was only because her family doctor tipped me off that she drank much more whiskey than was good for her that led me to the cause of her troubles.

Another patient of mine, a sweet, merry old farmer, ran up several hundred dollars worth of bills to find the cause of his abdonmial distresses, before I asked his wife what she thought was wrong. She said, "I don't know why he's here wasting our money; he knows what the trouble is. He goes on a binge of chewing tobacco and swallowing the juice, and that makes him sick."

When I asked the old farmer if his wife was right he said, "Yes, but I hoped you'd find something else, so I could go on chewing."

Nolen has some other suggestions for patients: Don't ask to be hospitalized unnecessarily. He says oftentimes, when a patient learns that she needs some X-ray studies which could be done outside the hospital, she asks to have them made in the hospital, so as to be able to take the expense off of her insurance. What such people don't realize is that unnecessary hospitalizations raise hospital costs, and eventually this means higher insurance premiums which we must all pay.

Another recipe from the Gold Seal Galley
Tuna Stroganoff

¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 tbsp. ketchup
Dash pepper
½ cup sour cream
2 cups cooked rice

Drain and separate tuna. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water. Cook onion and mushrooms in butter until tender. Blend in flour and brown. Add bouillon gradually and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients, except rice; heat. Serve over rice. Serves 6.

You can try this tasty menu idea using delicious Gold Seal solid white, flaked white or chunk light tuna.

Peaches and cream from Germaine Monteil

Because your skin is a living, breathing part of you, it constantly renews itself. Dead cells are pushed to the surface and clear "new" skin forms underneath. Unfortunately, those dead surface cells can make your skin look dull and dry and flaky. So Germaine Monteil solves the problem—with Facial Sluffing Cream. Just spread this silky cream on your face, let it dry a few minutes, and massage off. You'll see the fresh, glowing difference immediately. Your skin will look newly clear, translucent, as smooth as peaches and cream. Try it yourself and see. At the Bay.

Mick Jagger Named In Paternity Suit

LONDON — Singer Mick Jagger flew to Rome with his family Tuesday, a few hours after American singer Marsha Hunt claimed in court the Rolling Stones rock star was the father of her two-year-old daughter.

Jagger, ignoring a barrage of questions from reporters at London's Heathrow Airport, said only: "What's the title of her latest record?"

His wife, the former Bianca de Macias, said: "People can say what they like. Mick and I are very happy."

Miss Hunt, 26, star of the London production of the rock musical Hair, applied earlier in court for an affiliation order and the case was adjourned after a three-minute hearing until July 31.

Rumor, a 58-year-old bachelor and literature professor, has already headed three Italian governments, from December 1968 to August 1970.

LONDON — British actor Peter Sellers confirmed early today that his whirlwind romance with American star Liza Minnell has broken up. Earlier, Liza said her four-week romance with 47-year-old Sellers was all over, but she had no regrets. "How can you regret anything that was so happy?"

NEW YORK — on June 18, the family of the late Lex Barker, one of 13 movie Tarzans, held a seance to communicate with him through British medium Margaret Staves. At that seance, Miss Staves deciphered a message Barker had written before his death last month.

Barker's widow, Zan, and his son, Alexander, are "satisfied that Miss Staves had made contact with Barker and had caught a glimpse of the message," which had been locked in a bank vault, Seuart Lichtenstein of the National Enquirer, sponsor of the seance, said.

ASCOT, England — The Queen made her annual trek to the Ascot races Tuesday for a celebration marred by an unexpected shower.

Tuesday was the 18th consecutive day of sunshine in southern England. But immediately after the Queen emerged from Windsor Castle to drive in horse-drawn carriage to the race track, however, it started to rain.

WASHINGTON — Clarence Kelley believes the FBI today suffers from lack of leadership and lack of self-confidence but he hopes to correct those conditions if he is confirmed as the agency's new director.

Kelley expressed his views on the subject when he appeared before the senate judiciary committee which opened consideration of his nomination by President Nixon as the permanent successor to the late Edgar Hoover.

Brundage Weds Princess

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, West Germany (Reuter)—Avery Brundage, 85, former president of the International Olympic Committee, was married to a 36-year-old German princess today in a private ceremony in his hotel apartment.

The five-minute ceremony was performed by the Garmish Partenkirchen registry officer in the two-room apartment where Brundage has been living since last week.

It is Brundage's second marriage. His first wife, American musician Elizabeth Dunlap, died in 1971. The princess has not been married before.

SCIENCE BYPASSING MAN: GANDHI

OTTAWA (CP) — Man's mind has failed to expand with his growing technology and the advancement of science, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Tuesday.

Speaking at a dinner for more than 100 MPs, senators and government officials — her last social function of a three-day visit here — Mrs. Gandhi paid tribute to Prime Minister Trudeau as "a person who is hospitable to courage and experimentation."

Such leaders were rare, she said.

"Expanding education has brought knowledge but no wisdom or the self-conquest advocated by Buddha or Socrates; skill with machines has come at the cost of individual artistry."

Mrs. Gandhi used her premiss to defend India's refusal to sign international non-proliferation treaties.

"To us who live in India, the fact that millions of people in Asia, Africa and elsewhere, have become free and are striving to overcome the consequences of colonialism and technological backwardness is a prominent feature of our period.

Parents Blackened, Spies' Sons Charge

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The two sons of executed atomic spies Ethel and Julius Rosenberg named lawyer-author Louis Nizer in a $3-million suit Tuesday, saying he pirated death-house letters from their parents to them for use in his latest book.

Michael Meeropol, 30, and his brother Robert, 36, both of Springfield, Mass., also accused Nizer of painting the false picture that the Rosenbergs didn't really love their sons and "deliberately made themselves martyrs and wrongfully committed themselves to be executed."

After the Rosenbergs were executed exactly 20 years ago Tuesday, their two sons were adopted by Anne and Abel Meeropol.

In their suit, the sons also named Doubleday and Co., publisher of Nizer's book The Implosion of Conspiracy, an account of the Rosenberg case.

The sons allege that letters written to them by their parents had been made into a book called Death House Letters of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg. Proceeds from the copyrighted volume were to be used for the benefit of the sons, the suit claimed. The sons said that Nizer used parts of the letters without their permission.

The suit asks that further sales of the book be enjoined and that Nizer and Doubleday account for all their profits from the sale of the book which was published Feb. 9. The sons also want the profits to be added onto their $3 million in damages.

A hearing is scheduled for June 22.

Salaries previously ranged from $426 to $498 per month for clerk steno one, $461 to $539 for clerk steno two, and $530 to $624 for clerk steno five.

INTERNATIONALLY-KNOWN BASSOONIST HERE FRIDAY

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Bassoonist George Zukerman, in his world-wide concertizing, has been called variously the "Paganini," the "Casals" and the "heifitz" of the bassoon.

But for many people among the international musical fraternity it is already enough simply to speak of him as "Zukerman of the bassoon," the instrument he lightly refers to as "my symphonic piece of plumbing."

Born in England and trained principally in the United States, this unique artist is known everywhere as a Canadian and makes his home in Vancouver.

He is an impressario as well as a solo performer, directing an organization known as Overture Concerts.

On several occasions he has teamed up with Robin Wood, James Hunter and other Victoria Conservatory of Music principals on tours and recital appearances.

Zukerman will be presented Friday at 8 p.m. in recital by the conservatory at Craigdarroch Castle.

He will be assisted in the program by Wood and Hunter.

His program will include Adagio for bassoon and piano by Louis Spohr, a sonata by 17th century Johann Galliard, and a set of variations described by Zukerman as both romantic and spectacular in style, by Varionas, a 20th century Russian composer.

Friday's recital will be repeated with Wood and Hunter on Saturday at Tahsis.

There is no admission charge but donations toward the bursary and scholarship fund of the conservatory will be accepted.

Film Festival Slated At Coronet in Fall

Some of the world's leading playwrights, actors and directors will comprise a revolutionary eight-film repertory season at Victoria's 706-seat Coronet Theatre starting this fall.

It will be seen in 35 theatres in 24 Canadian cities on a one-a-month basis from October to May.

The films are being premiered in limited engagements of two evening and two matinee performances each.

Opening date at the Coronet is Oct. 29-30.

The National Theatre Company of Great Britain with Laurence Olivier and Alan Bates will be seen in Anton Chekhov's The Three Sisters directed by Olivier.

The Kurt-Weill-Maxwell Anderson collaboration, Lost in the Stars, will star Brock Peters, Melba Moore and Raymond St. Jacques.

GANDHI HERE SATURDAY

Mrs. Gandhi is expected to arrive Saturday afternoon and stay overnight at Government House before flying home to India the next day.

Some Pigeons To Escape Death

VENICE (AP) — Operation Pigeon has begun in Venice.

When it is through, an estimated three out of four pigeons will have been killed or resettled. The rest will have to change centuries-old habits.

To lovers of both art and birds, city authorities have promised that some pigeons will remain.

But they say with numbers increasing rapidly something had to be done to keep the pigeons healthy and reduce the damage they are causing to the architecture and sculpture of Venice's churches and palaces.

City authorities made the decision last year. The operation has gradually gone into effect under the supervision of a committee whose members include a representative of the National Agency for the Protection of Animals.

Special teams stalk the pigeons' favorite piazzas and palaces and capture those considered diseased. These are given a painless death.

Other pigeons will be netted here and freed a hundred or more kilometres from the city.

About 50,000 will be left. They will be assured a daily diet of grain and water in special troughs.

Potted Plants Benefit From Summer Outdoors

While so much goes on outdoors in summer to attract our interests, it helps the daily schedule if even some house plants can be set either on an apartment balcony or into the garden

Not all potted house plants enjoy summering outside. Some. like the thin leaved tropicals, resent wind. An unexpected shower of summer hail would tear the leaves to shreds. So you must consider the kinds of plants you have.

Azaleas in pots are normally garden plants, so even though you want to continue growing yours in a pot, it will be happier outside than in.

In the garden, bury the pot to the rim in a sunny place where a little afternoon shelter from trees or shrubs will shade the plant. Give plenty of water all summer.

On a balcony, place the azalea where sun reaches it for about six hours each day. To prevent the foliage from shrivelling in dry air, set the pot on a layer of stones in a wide bowl or metal tray with water among the stones but not reaching the drainage holes of the pot.

Water well as you find the soil below the surface becoming dry. A mist spray over the foliage is helpful.

Once you have a good-sized pebbled tray on the balcony you have a good spot for some of your other house plants.

★ ★ ★

The Christmas flowering cactus, the poinsettia, and even the various epiphyllums will do well with this setup.

Desert cacti and South Arican succulents like dryer air conditions, so do not require the pebbled dish with the water.

This week on Friday and Saturday, June 22 and 23, you have the opportunity to see fine amateur collections of cacti and succulents, most of them correctly named, on display at the Summer Show of the Victoria Horticultural Society.

This show is staged in First United Church Hall, 932 Balmoral Road, off Quadra St., just north of Pandora.

Other house plants to be shown and judged are African-violets, fuchias, ferns and foliage plants—all in pots.

Outdoor summer flowers, floral arrangements and designs, early summer vegetables, herb collections, these exhibits too are of value to anyone who enjoys visual beauty and good food.

Of special interest for business offices and apartments at this show will be a display of Bonsai, an art which a handful of Victorians has taken a long way in a few years. The skill in this most ancient art merits attention from those who spend much time in the sterile surroundings of buildings.

Bonsai is the outdoors in miniature, true to scale. Everything is real, for it is alive. The art is in control of size, never losing the ideal of beauty.

Show hours on Friday 2 to 10 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In a tournament held some years ago, East had opened the bidding with one heart, and a vulnerable South had overcalled with two diamonds. West tabled his cards and requested a cigarette. South obliged. The bidding then resumed, with West bellowing: "Double!" South, who had overcalled on a very poor hand, and knew that he was in for a beating, promptly grabbed "his" cigarette from West's mouth, and broke it in two.

All of which demonstrates (I think) that good bridge players give nothing away in the form of presents. If you beat them, you will have earned your victory through skill and imaginative play. Today's deal illustrates how this combination of skill and imagination defeated an apparently ironclad contract.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

Upon winning the opening club lead with his ace, East took a time-out before playing to trick two. East knew that declarer had at least a five-card club suit: West's opening lead of the club three, as his fourth-highest club, indicated that West had, at most, a five-card suit (which would be the case — as it was — if West possessed the deuce).

Also, a vulnerable South had opened the bidding. Gazing at his hand and the dummy, West concluded that South figured to have a good club suit as part of his opening bid — and, hence, that it would be futile for East to return a club at trick two.

As East viewed the set-up, his best chance of defeating three notrump rested in establishing his spade suit. This could (perhaps) come to pass if West had a sure entry card. At trick two, East returned the spade six!

South won this lead with his seven, after which he led the diamond ace. This was followed by a diamond to the board's king, after which came a third diamond, West winning with the queen.

Dummy's two remaining diamonds were now winners, but declarer never got to cash them. Upon winning the third diamond lead with his queen, West returned his remaining spade, ambushing dummy's king, and enabling East to cash three spade tricks. Had East returned a club at trick two, declarer would have romped in with his contract by establishing and cashing dummy's diamond suit.

FIGURES FUN WITH

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1889 for the game today. Two 8's, one 9, and one 1. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget both types of decimals, also powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 98 plus 8 minus 1 is a solution for 105.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 111. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

MP Gets 25 Letters Asking Pension Move

Esquimalt-Saanich MP Donald Munro has received about 25 letters so far from British pensioners concerned with British government refusal to give pension increases to its pensioners in Canada.

Only in countries with which Britain has reciprocal agreements on social security matters — and Canada isn't one of them — are the pension increases sent abroad.

Munro has written Marc Lalonde, minister of national health and welfare, bringing his attention to the problem.

Purpose of the letter, he told Lalonde, was "to prompt the Canadian government to enter into a reciprocal agreement in this area with Britain."

"I know that Canada pays, even without benefit of any such agreement, all pension increases to Canadians living in Britain," Munro's letter said.

"There may be other advantages Canadians living in Britain could obtain if such an agreement were concluded; certainly Britons living in this country . . . would certainly benefit.

"These people, not all of whom admittedly are yet voters, find it difficult to understand that pension increases accorded to their friends and relatives back in Britain are also offered to Britons who settled in France, Italy, Yugoslavia, Cyprus, Jamaica and the United States of America, for example, but are not available to them here in Canada — simply for lack of an agreement.

"Myself, I find it difficult to understand as well," said Munro.

Toll of 90 Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — If you go for a drive during the Dominion Day weekend, slow down and stay alert or you may be one of the about 90 persons who will die on Canadian streets and highways, says the Canada Safety Council.

The council predicts that 85 to 95 pedestrians and automobile passengers will die during the July 1 holiday weekend.

U.K. Blames B.C. Oyster

LONDON (CP) — A destructive, fast-spreading seaweed is growing out of control in the English Channel and some experts blame its introduction this year on a shipment of British Columbia oyster spawn.

The seaweed, sargassum mutecum, was unknown in the North Atlantic until February and since then has spread from a small colony off the Ise of Wight eastward to Portsmouth.

Its total extent is still relatively small but the British fisheries department is worried because of the weed's exploding growth along the west coast of North America when it was accidentally transplanted there in the 1930s.

Originating in Japan, where it is kept in control by the natural marine balance, the weed spread about 2,000 miles along the West Coast of Canada and the United States, smothering other forms of sea life as its green strands stretch out at a rate of an inch a day.

Fishing nets and even boats are sometimes entangled in the weed whose individual strands can grow up to 30 feet in length.

Sargassum muticum was brought to B.C. along with Japanese oyster sprat, or spawn, and a similar export of sprat to France from B.C. is considered by some experts as responsible for its arrival in the channel.

A spokesman for the fisheries department said there also is some chance that it came clinging to the bottom of a ship.

Attempts to control its spread by pulling out the weed have failed and the department now is considering the use of weed killer.

Spraying would be undertaken only reluctantly, said the spokesman, because it would kill off the plant and animal life as well as the unwelcome newcomer.

PESKY BOLL WEEVIL NEAR EXTINCTION

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The boll weevil, the pest that has plagued the United States cotton belt for decades, may be facing extinction from a sterilization program that has shown convincing results.

The U.S. cotton council says demise of the weevil could bring down prices of cotton clothing and significantly reduce the amount of pesticides used. The council estimates that 30 per cent of the pesticides used in the U.S. are aimed at the boll weevil.

The sterilization program has so far cleared the insect from 28,000 acres in three states, officials report.

The cotton council estimates that eradication of the boll weevil would cut cotton production costs by more than three cents a pound.

Under the technique being tested by the boll weevil lab, male weevils are chemically sterilized and then are released from low-flying aircraft into fields. The sterile males mate with female weevils, but the eggs never hatch.

After trying the system for two years on 28,000 acres in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, researchers say weevils are down to "undetectable" levels in the experiment areas.

Researchers said environmental effects of eradication appear minor compared with those from aerial application of pesticides.

Vancouver Landmark Razed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fire beat the wreckers' hammer to the old King Edward school building, destroying a Vancouver landmark with strong links to the development of education in British Columbia.

A spectacular three-alarm blaze swept through the four-storey high school, built in 1905 and for the last two years used as the special-program section of Vancouver City College, leaving the stone structure a total loss.

There was no immediate estimate of damage.

More than 1,000 students and teachers, including a group of deaf students, were in the school at mid-afternoon when the fire was discovered in the attic. All got out safely.

DESTRUCTION SWIFT

The fast-spreading flames sent the large dome atop the building crashing through the roof 15 minutes after the first alarm. Heat from the fire could be felt two blocks away and a strong breeze carried embers for blocks. Some landed at the Pacific Press building, a mile away.

The heat helped police hold back a crowd of more than 10,000 that gathered to watch firemen battle the blaze.

School principal Louis Monasch said the fire apparently had been burning for some time before it was discovered. He said it was probably caused by an electrical fault and ruled out arson because doors to the attic were locked.

He said the school, including the attic, had recently passed a fire department inspection.

The principal said he hoped the school, which served some 2,000 students, could be relocated temporarily in one of the city's high schools once they close for the summer.

DOOMED ANYWAY

The building was bought some time ago by Vancouver General Hospital, next door, and had been scheduled for demolition next year to make way for hospital expansion.

When it first opened its doors Jan. 5, 1905, the school was the largest high school in B.C. and was one of the first educational institutions built in the city.

It was known originally as Vancouver High School and College. The first college classes were under the jurisdiction of McGill University, Montreal. Later the building was the original site of the University of B.C.; it became part of Vancouver City College in 1965.

Until recently, the corridors of the building were hung with pictures of every graduating class from 1909 to 1962, attracting scores of former students who dropped in to refresh their memories.

$200 Fine For Burning

Victorians could be fined as much as $200 if they persist in burning refuse in their backyards, says deputy fire chief R. J. Coates.

The ban, which prohibits any kind of outdoor burning, went into effect June 1 and people still don't seem to have the message, Coates said.

Coates said the ban is covered by a city bylaw on air pollution, but actually comes from new provincial regulations.

After Sept. 1, residents are allowed to burn leaves and garden refuse but all other outdoor burning is prohibited at all times.

Name Change Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Indian leaders will ask the Society Incorporated for The Welfare of Arts, Science and Health (SIWASH) to change its name. Indians believe SIWASH, the initials the society goes by, is derogatory.

Gorge Vale Signs Pact

Gorge Vale Golf Club agreed to a two-year contract with the Canadian Union of Public Employees Tuesday night covering its five greenskeepers.

It is the first union contract at a private golf club in Greater Victoria. CUPE members agreed to it earlier.

The greenskeepers were earning $3.30 an hour and received a 26 cents an hour increase last December, said Hugh Reid, president of Gorge Vale.

Overturned Truck Spills Hog Fuel

The truck, owned by Pacific B.C. Transport Ltd., was travelling up a hill when the engine cut out. "Apparently" the brakes failed, the truck rolled 300 feet backwards overturning as it crashed into an embankment, said police.

Damage was estimated at $150 and the driver, Alvin W. Slater, 38, of 3312 Tennyson, was unhurt.

CUPE VOTE

Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will meet Saturday to vote on tentative settlements with Sooke and Saanich school boards, union representative Alex Markides said Monday.

The two school boards are due to make their decisions next week.

KNIT & CHAT

By VIOLET WEBER

A really pretty summer dress is often difficult to find. We think this one by Don Werle will prove to be everyone's favorite for the hot summer months.

Baring suntanned shoulders to the breeze, Werle has anchored the halter so cleverly there will never be a gap around the top of the dress — nor can it fall forward in the front. Clearly a masterpiece of cutting, the pattern will fit any size in the most flattering way imaginable.

The halter neckline is cut in a band from the bodice and features a pert self-bow. The dress itself falls from that halter line into a princess line, making much of the waistline and flaring out in a beautiful skirt.

While the material Werle prefers for summer is real linen, it is a pattern that could easily be translated into another fabric. Even some of the polyester knits would work well. For fall we see it in silks or perhaps a tissue faille for the evening hours.

To order Werle Couture Pattern W-6201 (10-16 new sizes), send $1.75 in U.S. funds, in cash, cheque or money order (no stamps) to Couture Patterns, Box 2740 G.P.O., New York, N.Y. 10001. Add 25 cents for first-class mailing. Print plainly your name, address, pattern number and size. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery.

Press Council Queries Provoke Small Response

Replies are coming in slowly to the Victoria Labor Council's suggested community press council but secretary Larry Ryan isn't surprised.

He said Tuesday there is a problem of basic communications in proposing a press council because "people are reluctant to go off into the unknown."

But, he added, the concept is "fairly well-known" and was a recommendation of the Senate Report on the Mass Media several years ago.

"If people don't read such reports," he said, then the documents are just "one-day sensations. If they have good recommendations, we should try to respond.

"We feel a press council would be a good initiative for the community to take. We are not out to create confrontation with the press but to get community concern with higher standards."

Two groups have made clear decisions so far, one for and one against the idea of a press council.

Camosun College said in a letter to Ryan that the "idea has merit" and should be pursued.

Esquimalt council decided last week to receive and file the labor council's letter with Mayor Art Young saying he is quite happy with the press.

Saanich and Oak Bay municipalities have both asked Ryan for more information.

No replies have been received by Ryan from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Victoria city council, the Alma Mater Society of the University of Victoria, Greater Victoria Teachers Association and the publishers of the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist.

"Some of these people haven't met yet so it is not surprising we haven't heard," said Ryan.

Refinery Appeals Ruling

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP) — The Pittston Co. filed suit Tuesday asking that suspended hearings on the company's proposed $350-million oil refinery at Eastport Me. be resumed.

The five-page complaint was filed in Kennebec County Superior Court by lawyers for the New York-based firm.

The action came in response to the state environmental protection board's decision Monday in Eastport to suspend the hearings for six months.

The 11-member panel said Pittston should use the time to try to resolve the Canadian government's official protest to the proposed refinery. Canadian officials said the facility would pose an unacceptable environmental risk.

The company's complaint said the board "has effectively taken away the plaintiff's right to a hearing because Canada doesn't have regulations under which we could proceed to get the permission."

In addition, lawyer Bruce Chandler of Waterville said, "Canada has made it very plain it will not consider anything until the Maine board has made its decision" on whether to accept Pittston's application to build the refinery.

EARLY BIRDS crowd round the pumps to be sure of getting gas when the service station opens in Oak Bluffs, on Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Last week, the nine stations on the island were forced to close early because of panic buying by residents and tourists, coupled with quotas imposed by the oil companies which limit the quantities of fuel service stations receive for sale to customers.

IAM Wildcats Hit Four Cities

Times News Services

Air Canada machinists hit four airports today with wildcat walkouts to protest their union's tentative contract agreement with the airline reached Tuesday.

Ramp crews walked off the job at Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Halifax and a spokesman for the International Association of machinist and Aerospace Workers said the spontaneous strikes could spread to other areas.

Air Canada reported by midday that the 100 Vancouver workers were returning to work—the 200 day shift employees at Montreal had ended their 45-minute walkout earlier — just as 45 to 50 Halifax workers walked off their jobs.

An airline spokesman said at Toronto, where about 300 workers remained on strike, short-haul traffic was "extremely sporadic" and the airline was appealing to short-distance travellers to "consider other forms of transportation."

He said the "strike" already forced cancellation of 14 departures from Toronto and one inbound flight to Montreal, and more cuts "were highly likely."

"The walkouts — definitely not authorized by the union, could be, in part, in protest against some of the contents of the agreement," and IAM spokesman said.

The IAM Tuesday reached a tentative agreement with Air Canada on the fifth day of talks under federal mediation, ending 17 days of rotating strike action at 32 different cities.

At that time, union officials said they expected rank and file membership to ratify the "reasonable settlement" within 10 days. Terms of the tentative settlement were not released.

A union source in Montreal said today "nobody likes" the proposed contract which, he said, offers a 16-per-cent increase over two years.

"In my shop, everybody was against the agreement," the source said, "but it all comes down to if they want to continue striking — because that means there will be a shutdown.

"There's a big difference between knowing a contract stinks and going on strike knowing you're going to be locked out," he said.

More than 100 flights had been cancelled earlier as the airline tried to return to normal operations following IAM strikes during the contract negotiations.

Ramp workers are responsible for handling baggage, loading and unloading of food and other supplies and cleaning aircraft cabins.

About 150 ramp workers at Toronto International Airport earlier walked out for two hours Tuesday night.

Sewage Flood In L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An underground sewage pipe burst Tuesday and flushed millions of gallons of raw sewage into the Los Angeles harbor. Health authorities today banned swimmers, water skiers and scuba divers.

The city sanitation bureau said it could take several days to a week to halt the flow of sewage, running at three to five million gallons a day, but it could be weeks before the harbor is safe for water sports.

Tons of chlorine was rushed to the harbor to reduce the bacteria count. The sewer pipe break ocurred at 3 a.m. Tuesday, and within 12 hours the city had dumped 1,500 pounds of chlorine into the harbor — enough for 3,000 home swimming pools.

The county health department prohibited all water contact sports in the harbor because of the danger of disease from the vast quantities of bacteria present in the sewage. The county board of supervisors ratified the quarantine in an emergency meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The quarantine affects Cabrillo beach, one of the city's biggest, which draws an average of 7,500 bathers on summer weekdays and up to 12,500 a day on weekends.

The ban will remain in force until the water meets state bacteria count standards, and officials said that could be a matter of several weeks.

The pipeline break, described by one official as "one of our larger ones of the past 10 years," occurred in a line on Terminal Island just outside the pumping plant that propels incoming sewage to a treatment plant.

CANADA MAY LOSE WHEAT DEAL

OTTAWA (FP) — Canada may have to pass up a $225 million wheat deal with India because of current low stockpiles.

India Prime Minister Indira Gandhi made the offer for 75 million bushels of wheat during her talks here earlier this week.

But from Winnipeg Gerry Vogel chief commissioner of the Wheat Board said: "We are not taking on new commitments until we see what deliveries we get."

It is believed that Mrs. Gandhi will be told to place the order again in the fall.

Harbor Project Okayed

But representatives of the developers, CIL Properties, left the council-in-committee meeting feeling far from elated at having cleared the first major hurdle toward the objective which they first unveiled more than six months ago.

CIL president John D'Eath told reporters the decision to get down to negotiating a land-use contract would be encouraging if the laid-down criteria for those negotiations were more in the developers' favor.

As it is, he said, the general guidelines recommended by the Advisory Planning Commission and endorsed by council's committee-of-the-whole represent a considerable reduction in the development's density.

D'Eath said this means the economic feasibility of the original proposal has been whittled down to the point where CIL considers itself at a disadvantage in relation to the planned Wharf Street development of developer J. A. Reid.

He noted that Reid is allowed to build to a floor-space ratio of 3 to 1 — that is, to provide a total floor area three times the site area — whereas he is being limited to a ratio of 1.4 to 1 (total floor area of 455,420 square feet or nearly 80,000 square feet less than CIL originally proposed).

Under Reid's land-use contract with the city he is having to provide only a "very narrow" waterfront walkway in front of his complex, D'Eath said.

But CIL is expecting to have to foot most of the bill — possibly as much as $250,000 — for providing a proper landscaped park skirting the Laurel Point foreshore.

"We (CIL and Reid) are competing for the same tenants, the same hotel business," D'Eath said. "Naturally we're disappointed . . . but I guess that's the way city councils work."

At his weekly press conference this morning, Mayor Peter Pollen said he considers D'Eath's concerns about com-

U.S. CUTS DUTY ON OIL

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon threw open the United States border to duty-free imports of petroleum products from Canada Tuesday, at a time when Canada already has imposed some export controls to protect its own consumers.

The president signed a proclamation delaying until next May 1 the period when a new system of "fees" is to apply to imports of Canadian petroleum products — separating Canadian imports from a fee schedule which went into effect last May 1 for imports from all other countries.

The decision was described by one Canadian official here as a "hunting licence" for American importers to seek supplies in Canada.

However, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced last Friday that "temporary controls" would be applied to exports of gasoline and heating oils to "ensure that unusual export demand for these products does not impair supplies to Canadian consumers."

It was also reported that the U.S. administration is considering tax incentives for cars that use less gas, requiring energy consumption labels on home appliances, lowering taxes on more efficient grades of fuel and imposing higher insulation requirements for new homes.

A worsening U.S. fuel shortage was reflected Tuesday in a spot survey that indicated almost half the gasoline stations there are operating at less than normal capacity.

The American Automobile Association said its third weekly spot check of 2,924 stations on main travel routes found 47 per cent curtailing operating hours, rationing gasoline to motorists, or both.

In a similar survey of nearly 2,000 stations a week ago, 64 per cent reported normal operations. The week before that, it was 75 per cent.

Meanwhile, in Canada The National Energy Board has approved a majority of the export applications reaching it since export controls on gasoline and heating oils went into effect, a board spokesman said Tuesday.

Many approvals dealt with existing contract obligations by refiners and should not be interpreted as weak enforcement of the controls, he said.

86% in Favor Of Strike At 11 Mills

The United Paperworkers International Union announced Tuesday its members have voted an average 86 per cent approval of strike action in the current contract renewal dispute at 11 mills.

The individual mill votes ranged from 78 per cent to 97 per cent, E. P. O'Neal, regional vice-president of the union which has 7,200 members at the mills, said today. O'Neal said he is hopeful negotiations wil resume soon with the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the companies.

included in the dispute are newsprint machine workers at the Crofton mill and all employees at the Port Alberni, Campbell River and Port Alice mills on Vancouver Island.

The newly-reopened pulp and paper mill at Ocean Falls, which the B.C. government acquired from Crown Zellerbach, is not involved in the strike votes, O'Neal said.

"Both sides agreed ahead of time to be bound by the result of negotiations. We are trying to co-operate because they are just getting started up and people are just moving back in," he said.

UPIU served 10 days termination of contract notice on the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau late Tuesday.

So far, 72 hours strike notice required by the Mediation Services Act has not been served.

The current contract expires June 30.

Negotiations broke off earlier, while the strike votes were held last week with spokesmen for both sides expecting talks to resume after the votes had been taken.

The union said talks foundered "mainly on money matters" including health and welfare, long-term disability, pensions, vacations, wage adjustments and the main wage demand of 10½ per cent, with a minimum of 55 cents an hour, in each year of a two-year agreement.

The companies have offered a two-year contract, including a 7½ per cent wage increase with a minimum of 33½ cents an hour this year, and 7½ per cent next year.

Present base labor rate is $4.08½ cents an hour and the mechanics' rate is $5.70 an hour.

The other union in the industry, the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, with 4,500 members at eight pulp mills, has not moved to take a strike vote.

FRIEND'S BOUNTY UP NIXON'S ALLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI)— With an assist from their friend Charles "Bebe" Rebozo, the Nixons have had a bowling alley installed in the White House so they won't have to cross the street to bowl.

The one-lane alley was built secretly last January, but has only now come to light.

Mrs. Helen McCain Smith, Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, initially told reporters that the Nixons paid for the alley out of their own pockets.

Later, however, Mrs. Smith said further checking showed that the equipment and lane were donated by a private company and that Rebozo, of Key Biscayne, Fla., paid the bill for decorating.

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand disclosed Tuesday that some cells and visitors' areas in Canadian penitentiaries are "bugged" and stated that he doesn't know if electronic devices are used in the institutions to overhear conversations between a prisoner and his wife or his lawyer.

The solicitor-general said that when he was asked a few weeks ago if bugging was carried out in penitentiaries, he was not aware that it was. But he has since found out that the practice is followed in rare cases, he explained.

Asked if the devices are used to monitor conversations between prisoners and their wives and families, Allmand said that all he was told is that bugging is carried out on prisoners and their visitors when it is felt information concerning crimes may be obtained in this way.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former White House counsel John Dean has told the Senate Watergate committee under oath that he "has documents where President Nixon requested that tax audits be turned off on friends of his," according to a written summary of Dean's testimony.

The summary, made after a closed-door session Saturday, does not describe the documentation or state the names of any of the president's friends who might have been involved in such an action.

"Nixon said that the Democrats had always had effective use of the IRS audits, but they (the Republicans) had failed," according to the summary.

"Fragmentary leaks of charges attributed to John Dean have been appearing over the past several weeks. He will be testifying in public under oath next week. We will have no comment on that testimony before it is given."

The Washington Post has obtained a copy of two pages of the summary, prepared by staff members of the senate committee. Quotations are from the summary and not necessarily Dean's own words.

The summary also says:

—Nixon told Dean he hoped Dean was keeping a list of reporters who were giving them (the election committee) trouble and they would take care of them after the election.

—The White House thought that Sen. Howard Baker (R — Tenn.), the Republican vice-chairman of the committee "was going to assist" the president in the Watergate hearings. Baker Tuesday night denied helping the White House and said — as he did on televison Sunday — that he rebuffed attempts by the White House to influence the selection of the Republican counsel of the committee.

—At a Feb. 10 meeting at La Costa, Calif., Dean, along with White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, former domestic affairs chief John Ehrlichman, and special presidential counsel Richard Moore, discussed paying money to the Watergate defendants.

The summary says: "Moore was asked to go to New York and prevail upon Mitchell to get money for the defendants.

HYDRO GOUGES: McGEER

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro is gouging residential consumers and should reduce gas rates by at least 20 per cent, Liberal MLA Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

McGeer told the B.C. Energy Commission that rates may still be too high, even after a 20-per-cent reduction.

He charged that Hydro is getting a rate or return on its gas distribution operation that would be unacceptable for any public body.

Hydro, unlike its competition, pays no taxes and no franchise fees, has a more efficient distribution system and still charges residential consumers about 15-per-cent higher rates, he said.

"The side-by-side operation of Inland Natural Gas and B.C. Hydro over the past 10 years is an instructive object lesson.

"B.C. Hydro obtains the same natural gas as Inland. However, it charges substantially more to distribute this gas to the customers it serves even though the area it covers has decided advantages in density of population and efficiency of service.

Plants Linked to Viruses

Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Research here has opened up the startling and disturbing possibility that human viruses may be able to infect plants and that, as a corollary, plants might be capable of serving as a reservoir of human viruses.

Such a situation would violate all existing assumptions about viral behavior, although it is known that plant viruses sometimes infect and kill insects.

Experiments carried out at St. Thomas's Hospital medical school in London and reported in the medical journal The Lancet demonstrate that the inoculation of plant leaves with a serum containing human hepatitis virus B produces dramatic local damage.

This does not, however, prove that the plants were infected or that the virus caused the damage. The virologists involved in the work lean toward the alternative possibility that the serum in which the virus lives may also contain a protein that is highly poisonous to plants.

Virologists have already tried to pass the plant-damaging "factor"—whether virus or protein—from a damaged plant to healthy plants, but without success. This suggests to them that it may not be the virus that is directly involved.

The report in The Lancet asks whether it is possible that an animal virus can reproduce itself while living in a plant, a question to which there is no answer at the present time.

Freeze

Risk of Flooding Prompts Saanich Building Cutback

A freeze on new construction in a 12 square block area of north Gordon Head was recommended Tuesday by Saanich public works committee because of poor drainage and risk of flooding.

Aldermen urged council to approve the action and to request priority be given installation of drainage systems.

"If we don't freeze the area we're just asking for trouble because there's just no where to drain the water," said municipal engineer Bob Daye.

The area is bounded by Kenmore, Columbia, Hawthorne and Robinwood. It contains 67 houses and 91 vacant lots, for which six building permits are pending.

Committee was told the administrator is examining long-range capital proposals for complete drainage of the area, which is relatively flat and with poor natural runoff.

The move comes at a time when residential development of Gordon Head is keying for a new surge as construction of sanitary sewers proceeds toward completion this year.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said the freeze is a sensible move, provided potential builders could be assured of reasonably quick action to allow development to continue.

In a related move, committee was asked by the engineer to recommend to council a new method of guaranteeing that developers install essential services to property.

Practice has been to require a cash deposit refundable with completion of the work, in which services are defined as a road properly gazetted and accessible to emergency vehicles, water supply, sewer or approved sanitary disposal method, and an approved drainage system or ditching.

Daye said the municipal solicitor interprets recent provincial legislation to mean that cash deposits are no longer legal and he recommended that building permits be withheld until essential services have been approved.

Passmore said he was worried that this would create inflexibility in an already intractable system.

"You always hear that Saanich is the worst municipality to get a building permit. I don't exaggerate; you hear it all the time," he said.

Daye did not disagree, but offered the explanation that "in many cases it is not always our fault," and pointed to other regulatory bodies such as metro health.

But he said procedure had improved in the past four months and further progress is expected with the recent appointment of a full-time subdivision engineer. Faster granting of permits is a high departmental priority, Daye said.

Prisoner Home for City

Half-Way Centre to Handle 15 to 20 Inmates

The Canadian Penitentiary Service will open a community correctional centre in Victoria this fall, a supervised home where prison inmates will be eased back into the community.

In a letter to Mayor Peter Pollen describing the program, deputy regional director George Foster said the service is interested in renting a house which will accommodate 15 to 20 as well as a staff of about seven.

While a location has not yet been decided, the penitentiary service aims to have the centre operating by Sept. 1, Foster said from Vancouver today.

The letter describes a community correctional centre as "basically a supervised residence for inmates who are carefully selected for release on the basis of individual response and progress, and a service by which they are provided with necessary contacts and guidance as they serve the remainder of their sentences working or gaining further education within the community."

There are two centres in Vancouver, one of them in operation for five years, and others in major centres across Canada.

"The inmates who will be assigned to the Victoria community correctional centre will be on day parole," Foster's letter says. "As the name implies, this is a form of parole which permits inmates who are nearing the end of their sentence to leave the penitentiary on a day-to-day basis, usually to work or study in the community. It is an accepted and successful program."

The letter to Pollen says it is not seeking endorsement of the plan.

"However, if you or city council do have any reservations or further questions, would you please let me know. . . ."

Asked for his views today, Pollen said introduction of this type of centre into an established neighborhood will obviously have "sociological ramifications," but it is difficult for the layman to know what those will involve.

He said one of the things he will want to know is the originating source of the inmates.

"If they were coming from one of the advanced crime areas such as Montreal or Vancouver I would question its advisability," he said.

But if the inmates were "run-of-the-mill" offenders seeking to rehabilitate themselves into society it would be difficult to find any real grounds for concern,

Foster said today almost all of the centre's residents would come from William Head, a minimum security prison being upgraded to medium security.

William Head director Gamaliel Milner said the inmates going to the Victoria centre would be those with a link to the community, either former residents or attending school here.

While theh length of time an inmate might spend at the centre will vary, he estimated it might average two or three months.

Foster's letter to Pollen notes it is now a legal requirement that every inmate released from a penitentiary must accept a period of supervision.

He added today that a new policy has the National Parole Board approving all parole cases, meaning there will be a double screening of all inmates going to the Victoria centre. They will have to be considered and recommended first by the penitentiary service and then cleared by the parole board.

The two Vancouver centres have produced no problems, he said.

Mrs. Follows Mr. In Mayor's Chair

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Greater Victoria's second lady mayor has been elected with a mandate any politician would envy.

Mrs. Ev Mountain, 211 Anson, recently defeated five male candidates for the mayoralty of Work Point army base. Almost 90 per cent of the electors went to the polls.

Heading a council of five men and three women with eight others on the "stand-by list" in case they're needed to replace councillors posted to other places, Mayor Mountain has no illusions as to how she won.

The first woman to head the armed forces base's council, she explains:

"I've just lived here so long —9½ years—they simply recognized my name more than most of the others."

With her first regular council meeting slated for July 17, Mrs. Mountain has had no trouble appointing committee chairman either:

"They just filled in all the offices. They all knew what they wanted, recreation or whatever."

Mother of three girls and a boy, Work Point's new mayor explains her main duty:

"To try and produce for the community what the community wants and to try and help people solve their porblems as they come up."

With 15½ years of on-base living to her credit—three of them in Calgary and another three in Germany—she has plenty of expertise.

When Mayor Derek Bamford was elected the first mayor of Work Point in 1971, naturally, a mayoralty chain of office was a priority.

Undoubtedly the most inexpensive mayoralty trapping in Greater Victoria, it's also the most unique.

Emblazoned on it are the cap badges of the various units to which the Work Point residents are attached.

Appended from its base is a shiny length of pipe, emblematic of another piece of local history—the Macaulay outfall which was installed the year of Work Point's incorporation.

To his surprise, Mountain was elected mayor in 1972 and he's delighted the mayoraly seat is becoming a family tradition.

Mayor Mountain has yet to meet her counterpart, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

She has one big advantage over Mrs. Elford.

Instead of raising taxes to run her operation, Mayor Mountain only has to call on willing women volunteers to cover expenses by putting on fund-raising events.

With no tax troubles, she won't have to climb political mountains to keep atop the popularity poll.

CONSTRUCTION MEN HURT IN FALL

Two construction workers were rushed to Victoria General Hospital early today after falling from the top of a three-storey apartment building.

Frank Pohl, 22, of 3030 Jutland, and Bruce Atkinson, 33, of 6910 Beyness, were unloading 2500 pounds of lumber which had been hoisted by crane onto some framework for a balcony at 820 Craigflower.

The framework collapsed and the lumber crashed through two other sets of studs to the ground. Both men fell with th lumber and another man, Gene Bouchard, was left hanging in the air from the crane. He swung onto the roof.

Pohl was admitted to Victoria General for observation and Atkinson was released.

Marriage Saved Says Escaper

A man who said he escaped from William Head institution to save his marriage told the court Tuesday he had accomplished his purpose.

Brock Flett, 25, was sentenced to six months in jail for escaping lawful custody Jan. 1 by Judge William Ostler.

Flett was picked up by police at Cook and Pembroke Monday afternoon.

He had been due for release in November after being sentenced in November, 1969, to five years for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. He was parolled in July, 1971, but was sentenced to six months in May, 1972, for attempting to deal in a forged document.

Flett's six-month sentence must be served after his regular term expires.

★ ★ ★

"My being in jail had been so tough on our marriage I had to get out to save it," Flett told Ostler.

Flett told the court he had taken his wife and two-year-old son, who he had never seen before he escaped, and gone to live and work in California.

"It was a good five months," Flett said.

"I showed her I could get a job and build a family. I wanted to get my time in and get it over with and I'm confident in my head I can do it.

"We got things straightened out and I decided to come back to Victoria and turn myself in. Unfortunately I was picked up before I had a chance to do it."

★ ★ ★

Flett said his wife was pregnant again and he now had a sense of responsibility.

Ostler said Flett's attitude was a good one.

"But you must be patient and I hope you can spend you jail sentence with as much patience as you can muster. When your time is finished, you can return to your wife and family."

Flett was remanded for one week so he could consult a lawyer.

Pollen Touts Young for Mayor

Mayor Peter Pollen has suggested to Ald. Mike Young that he consider running for the mayoralty in the Nov. 17 civic election.

Pollen made the suggestion at his weekly press conference this morning, telling reporters that Young has said neither yes or no but is "thinking about it."

Asked whewther he intends to seek re-election when his current two-year term expires, Pollen said he would like to see the city continue the "enlightened planning" set in train over the the past two or three years, and he feels sure that would happen under the leadership of a "young, high-calibre individual" such as Young.

"But if Neanderthals were to run I might get slightly Irish and say 'no way'," he added.

Pollen said after two years as an alderman and nearly two as mayor he tends to think he needs a change, and "there are a million things I could do with my time."

During the conference, the first since his recent visit to Charlottetown, P.E.I., for the convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Pollen volunteered comment on a wide variety of topics ranging from local civic problems to the fiscal policies of the federal government.

He took pains to stress that city council's regular Tuesday afternoon "caucus" sessions "are not and nor have they ever been in camera."

Pollen said the weekly "bull session" is a useful way for him to bring aldermen up to date on the week's developments, and for council to discuss fully, without the debate limitations of full council meetings, a wide range of subjects.

But the only matters held in camera are thos concerning property transactions and personnel, he said.

These were some of Pollen's other observations:

On the CFMM conference — Although much time was frittered away on social activities, the conference did accomplish a great deal. One of the things which impressed him was Canada's wealth of "extremely astute" mayors and aldermen, often standing "head and shoulders above the representatives of some senior governments."

On reports that developer J. A. Mace is fed up with battling the city over his proposed Bay Village development and considering pulling out — "I will be delighted to contribute to a going-away present. If he is going away it will be one of the delights of my life."

YOUNG

9.8% PAY BOOST FOR SENIOR STAFF

An across-the-board salary increase of 9.83 per cent for senior city hall staff was recommended Tuesday by city council's committee-of-the-whole.

The increase, effective April 1, 1973, will apply to 40 department heads, deputies, professional assistants and non-union secretarial staff and will cost the city an estimated $57,000 this year.

Provision for the increase was made in the city's 1973 budget.

The recommendation will go to council's finance committee for endorsement Thursday, and will likely be ratified by council next week.

Labor Council Tie Rejected

Members of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Government Employees' Union have overwhelmingly defeated a move to affiliate with the Victoria Labor Council, it was announced today.

The branch has 2,000 members and 1,434 of them voted in the referendum.

Against affiliation with the labor council were 1,150 members, or 80.2 per cent of those voting, while 269 were in favor and 15 ballots were spoiled.

Branch president Pat Harkness said he is "very pleased" at the 71.7 per cent response in the referendum and "I have no sour grapes at the result. That's their wishes."

He said there are probably 1,150 reasons for the rejection of affiliation.

"There is a definite need to revise the historical attitude of predominantly white collar groups towards labor councils at the local level," he said.

"There's a need for the public image of labor at the local level to be improved. Organizing white collar groups now is becoming a reality."

Harkness noted that the BCGEU has been affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress for a long time and recently it affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

"May be they just felt it's enough at this time," he said.

Air Wildcats Hit Four Cities

Times News Services

Air Canada machinists hit four airports today with wildcat walkouts to protest their union's tentative contract agreement with the airline reached Tuesday.

Ramp crews walked off the job at Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Halifax and a spokesman for the International Association of machinist and Aerospace Workers said the spontaneous strikes could spread to other areas.

Air Canada reported by midday that the 100 Vancouver workers were returning to work—the 200 day shift employees at Montreal had ended their 45-minute walkout earlier — just as 45 to 50 Halifax workers walked off their jobs.

An airline spokesman said at Toronto, where about 300 workers remained on strike, short-haul traffic was "extremely sporadic" and the airline was appealing to short-distance travellers to "consider other forms of transportation."

He said the "strike" already forced cancellation of 14 departures from Toronto and one inbound flight to Montreal, and more cuts "were highly likely."

"The walkouts — definitely not authorized by the union, could be, in part, in protest against some of the contents of the agreement," an IAM spokesman said.

The IAM Tuesday reached a tentative agreement with Air Canada on the fifth day of talks under federal mediation, ending 17 days of rotating strike action at 32 different cities.

At that time, union officials said they expected rank and file membership to ratify the "reasonable settlement" within 10 days. Terms of the tentative settlement were not released.

A union source in Montreal said today "nobody likes" the proposed contract which, he said, offers a 16-per-cent increase over two years.

"In my shop, everybody was against the agreement," the source said, "but it all comes down to if they want to continue striking — because that means there will be a shutdown.

"There's a big difference between knowing a contract stinks and going on strike knowing you're going to be locked out," he said.

More than 100 flights had been cancelled earlier as the airline tried to return to normal operations following IAM strikes during the contract negotiations.

Ramp workers are responsible for handling baggage, loading and unloading of food and other supplies and cleaning aircraft cabins.

About 150 ramp workers at Toronto International Airport earlier walked out for two hours Tuesday night.

Sewage Flood In L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An underground sewage pipe burst Tuesday and flushed millions of gallons of raw sewage into the Los Angeles harbor. Health authorities today banned swimmers, water skiers and scuba divers.

The city sanitation bureau said it could take several days to a week to halt the flow of sewage, running at three to five million gallons a day, but it could be weeks before the harbor is safe for water sports.

Tons of chlorine was rushed to the harbor to reduce the bacteria count. The sewer pipe break ocurred at 3 a.m. Tuesday, and within 12 hours the city had dumped 1,500 pounds of chlorine into the harbor — enough for 3,000 home swimming pools.

The county health department prohibited all water contact sports in the harbor because of the danger of disease from the vast quantities of bacteria present in the sewage. The county board of supervisors ratified the quarantine in an emergency meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The quarantine affects Cabrillo beach, one of the city's biggest, which draws an average of 7,500 bathers on summer weekdays and up to 12,500 a day on weekends.

The ban will remain in force until the water meets state bacteria count standards, and officials said that could be a matter of several weeks.

The pipeline break, described by one official as "one of our larger ones of the past 10 years," occurred in a line on Terminal Island just outside the pumping plant that propels incoming sewage to a treatment plant.

TAX BILL APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to Finance Minister Turner's controversial corporate tax measures today.

Conservative and Social Credit members joined the Liberals in voting for the measures, which now will undergo study in committee, where amendments are possible.

The official vote showed 194 in favor and 30, all New Democrats, against.

Thirty-nine members were missing from the House when the vote was taken—seven Liberals, 26 Conservatives, one New Democrat and five Social Crediters.

Harbor Project Okayed

But representatives of the developers, CIL Properties, left the council-in-committee meeting feeling far from elated at having cleared the first major hurdle toward the objective which they first unveiled more than six months ago.

CIL president John D'Eath told reporters the decision to get down to negotiating a land-use contract would be encouraging if the laid-down criteria for those negotiations were more in the developers' favor.

As it is, he said, the general guidelines recommended by the Advisory Planning Commission and endorsed by council's committee-of-the-whole represent a considerable reduction in the development's density.

D'Eath said this means the economic feasibility of the original proposal has been whittled down to the point where CIL considers itself at a disadvantage in relation to the planned Wharf Street development of developer J. A. Reid.

He noted that Reid is allowed to build to a floor-space ratio of 3 to 1 — that is, to provide a total floor area three times the site area — whereas he is being limited to a ratio of 1.4 to 1 (total floor area of 455,420 square feet or nearly 80,000 square feet less than CIL originally proposed).

Under Reid's land-use contract with the city he is having to provide only a "very narrow" waterfront walkway in front of his complex, D'Eath said.

But CIL is expecting to have to foot most of the bill — possibly as much as $250,000 — for providing a proper landscaped park skirting the Laurel Point foreshore.

"We (CIL and Reid) are competing for the same tenants, the same hotel business," D'Eath said. "Naturally we're disappointed . . . but I guess that's the way city councils work."

At his weekly press conference this morning, Mayor Peter Pollen said he considers D'Eath's concerns about com-

U.S. CUTS DUTY ON OIL

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon threw open the United States border to duty-free imports of petroleum products from Canada Tuesday, at a time when Canada already has imposed some export controls to protect its own consumers.

The president signed a proclamation delaying until next May 1 the period when a new system of "fees" is to apply to imports of Canadian petroleum products — separating Canadian imports from a fee schedule which went into effect last May 1 for imports from all other countries.

The decision was described by one Canadian official here as a "hunting licence" for American importers to seek supplies in Canada.

However, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced last Friday that "temporary controls" would be applied to exports of gasoline and heating oils to "ensure that unusual export demand for these products does not impair supplies to Canadian consumers."

It was also reported that the U.S. administration is considering tax incentives for cars that use less gas, requiring energy consumption labels on home appliances, lowering taxes on more efficient grades of fuel and imposing higher insulation requirements for new homes.

A worsening U.S. fuel shortage was reflected Tuesday in a spot survey that indicated almost half the gasoline stations there are operating at less than normal capacity.

The American Automobile Association said its third weekly spot check of 2,924 stations on main travel routes found 47 per cent curtailing operating hours, rationing gasoline to motorists, or both.

In a similar survey of nearly 2,000 stations a week ago, 64 per cent reported normal operations. The week before that, it was 75 per cent.

Meanwhile, in Canada The National Energy Board has approved a majority of the export applications reaching it since export controls on gasoline and heating oils went into effect, a board spokesman said Tuesday.

Many approvals dealt with existing contract obligations by refiners and should not be interpreted as weak enforcement of the controls, he said.

The one-lane alley was built secretly last January, but has only now come to light.

Mrs. Helen McCain Smith, Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, initially told reporters that the Nixons paid for the alley out of their own pockets.

Later, however, Mrs. Smith said further checking showed that the equipment and lane were donated by a private company and that Rebozo, of Key Biscayne, Fla., paid the bill for decorating.

86% in Favor Of Strike At 11 Mills

The United Paperworkers International Union announced Tuesday its members have voted an average 86 per cent approval of strike action in the current contract renewal dispute at 11 mills.

The individual mill votes ranged from 78 per cent to 97 per cent, E. P. O'Neal, regional vice-president of the union which has 7,200 members at the mills, said today. O'Neal said he is hopeful negotiations wil resume soon with the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the companies.

Included in the dispute are newsprint machine workers at the Crofton mill and all employees at the Port Alberni, Campbell River and Port Alice mills on Vancouver Island.

The newly-reopened pulp and paper mill at Ocean Falls, which the B.C. government acquired from Crown Zellerbach, is not involved in the strike votes, O'Neal said.

"Both sides agreed ahead of time to be bound by the result of negotiations. We are trying to co-operate because they are just getting started up and people are just moving back in," he said.

UPIU served 10 days termination of contract notice on the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau late Tuesday.

So far, 72 hours strike notice required by the Mediation Services Act has not been served.

The current contract expires June 30.

Negotiations broke off earlier, while the strike votes were held last week with spokesmen for both sides expecting talks to resume after the votes had been taken.

The union said talks foundered "mainly on money matters" including health and welfare, long-term disability, pensions, vacations, wage adjustments and the main wage demand of 10½ per cent, with a minimum of 55 cents an hour, in each year of a two-year agreement.

The companies have offered a two-year contract, including a 7½ per cent wage increase with a minimum of 33½ cents an hour this year, and 7½ per cent next year.

Present base labor rate is $4.08½ cents an hour and the mechanics' rate is $5.70 an hour.

The other union in the industry, the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, with 4,500 members at eight pulp mills, has not moved to take a strike vote.

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand disclosed Tuesday that some cells and visitors' areas in Canadian penitentiaries are "bugged" and stated that he doesn't know if electronic devices are used in the institutions to overhear conversations between a prisoner and his wife or his lawyer.

The solicitor-general said that when he was asked a few weeks ago if bugging was carried out in penitentiaries, he was not aware that it was. But he has since found out that the practice is followed in rare cases, he explained.

Asked if the devices are used to monitor conversations between prisoners and their wives and families, Allmand said that all he was told is that bugging is carried out on prisoners and their visitors when it is felt information concerining crimes may be obtained in this way.

He promised to investigate the matter further.

SLIGHT GAIN FOR DOLLAR

LONDON (UPI) — The value of the U.S. dollar rose marginally today for the second consecutive day, and the price of gold declined.

The two-day rally by the dollar, following its drop to record lows in most European markets Monday, checked at least temporarily the currency's two-week downward slide.

"The heat has come off the dollar today," said a spokesman for a Swiss bank in London.

Nixon Halted Tax Audits On His Friends: Dean

By BOB WOODWARD and CARL BERNSTEIN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former White House counsel John Dean has told the Senate Watergate committee under oath that he "has documents where President Nixon requested that tax audits be turned off on friends of his," according to a written summary of Dean's testimony.

The summary, made after a closed-door session Saturday, does not describe the documentation or state the names of any of the president's friends who might have been involved in such an action.

"Nixon said that the Democrats had always had effective use of the IRS audits, but they (the Republicans) had failed," according to the summary.

"Fragmentary leaks of charges attributed to John Dean have been appearing over the past several weeks. He will be testifying in public under oath next week. We will have no comment on that testimony before it is given."

The Washington Post has obtained a copy of two pages of the summary, prepared by staff members of the senate committee. Quotations are from the summary and not necessarily Dean's own words.

The summary also says:

—Nixon told Dean he hoped Dean was keeping a list of reporters who were giving them (the election committee) trouble and they would take care of them after the election.

—The White House thought that Sen. Howard Baker (R — Tenn.), the Republican vice-chairman of the committee, "was going to assist" the president in the Watergate hearings. Baker Tuesday night denied helping the White House and said — as he did on televison Sunday — that he rebuffed attempts by the White House to influence the selection of the Republican counsel of the committee.

—At a Feb. 10 meeting at La Costa, Calif., Dean, along with White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, former domestic affairs chief John Ehrlichman, and special presidential counsel Richard Moore, discussed paying money to the Watergate defendants.

The summary says: "Moore was asked to go to New York and prevail upon Mitchell to get money for the defendants.

HYDRO GOUGES: McGEER

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro is gouging residential consumers and should reduce gas rates by at least 20 per cent, Liberal MLA Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

McGeer told the B.C. Energy Commission that rates may still be too high, even after a 20-per-cent reduction.

He charged that Hydro is getting a rate or return on its gas distribution operation that would be unacceptable for any public body.

Hydro, unlike its competition, pays no taxes and no franchise fees, has a more efficient distribution system and still charges residential consumers about 15-per-cent higher rates, he said.

"The side-by-side operation of Inland Natural Gas and B.C. Hydro over the past 10 years is an instructive object lesson.

"B.C. Hydro obtains the same natural gas as Inland. However, it charges substantially more to distribute this gas to the customers it serves even though the area it covers has decided advantages in density of population and efficiency of service.

Plants Linked to Viruses

Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Research here has opened up the startling and disturbing possibility that human viruses may be able to infect plants and that, as a corollary, plants might be capable of serving as a reservoir of human viruses.

Such a situation would violate all existing assumptions about viral behavior, although it is known that plant viruses sometimes infect and kill insects.

Experiments carried out at St. Thomas's Hospital medical school in London and reported in the medical journal The Lancet demonstrate that the inoculation of plant leaves with a serum containing human hepatitis virus B produces dramatic local damage.

This does not, however, prove that the plants were infected or that the virus caused the damage. The virologists involved in the work lean toward the alternative possibility that the serum in which the virus lives may also contain a protein that is highly poisonous to plants.

Virologists have already tried to pass the plant-damaging "factor"—whether virus or protein—from a damaged plant to healthy plants, but without success. This suggests to them that it may not be the virus that is directly involved.

The report in The Lancet asks whether it is possible that an animal virus can reproduce itself while living in a plant, a question to which there is no answer at the present time.

Freeze

Risk of Flooding Prompts Saanich Building Cutback

A freeze on new construction in a 12 square block area of north Gordon Head was recommended Tuesday by Saanich public works committee because of poor drainage and risk of flooding.

Aldermen urged council to approve the action and to request priority be given to installation of drainage systems.

"If we don't freeze the area we're just asking for trouble because there's just nowhere to drain the water," said municipal engineer Bob Daye.

The area is bounded by Kenmore, Columbia, Hawthorne and Robinwood. It contains 67 houses and 91 vacant lots, for which six building permits are pending.

Committee was told the administrator is examining long-range capital proposals for complete drainage of the area, which is relatively flat and with poor natural runoff.

The move comes at a time when residential development of Gordon Head is keying for a new surge as construction of sanitary sewers proceeds toward completion this year.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said the freeze is a sensible move, provided potential builders could be assured of reasonably quick action to allow development to continue.

In a related move, committee was asked by the engineer to recommend to council a new method of guaranteeing that developers install essential services to property.

Practice has been to require a cash deposit refundable with completion of the work, in which services are defined as a road, properly gazetted and accessible to emergency vehicles, water supply, sewer or approved sanitary disposal method, and an approved drainage system or ditching.

Daye said the municipal solicitor interprets recent provincial legislation to mean that cash deposits are no longer legal and he recommended that building permits be withheld until essential services have been approved.

Passmore said he was worried that this would create inflexibility in an already intractable system.

"You always hear that Saanich is the worst municipality to get a building permit. I don't exaggerate; you hear it all the time," he said.

Daye did not disagree, but offered the explanation that "in many cases it is not always our fault," and pointed to other regulatory bodies such as metro health.

But he said procedure had improved in the past four months and further progress is expected with the recent appointment of a full-time subdivision engineer. Faster granting of permits is a high departmental priority, Daye said.

The committee asked for more study by the engineer, solicitor and development engineer before reconsidering the proposal.

Half-Way Centre to Handle 15 to 20 Inmates

The Canadian Penitentiary Service will open a community correctional centre in Victoria this fall, a supervised home where prison inmates will be eased back into the community.

In a letter to Mayor Peter Pollen describing the program, deputy regional director George Foster said the service is interested in renting a house which will accommodate 15 to 20 as well as a staff of about seven.

While a location has not yet been decided, the penitentiary service aims to have the centre operating by Sept. 1, Foster said from Vancouver today.

The letter describes a community correctional centre as "basically a supervised residence for inmates who are carefully selected for release on the basis of individual response and progress, and a service by which they are provided with necessary contacts and guidance as they serve the remainde of their sentences working or gaining further education within the community."

There are two centres in Vancouver, one of them in operation for five years, and others in major centres across Canada.

"The inmates who will be assigned to the Victoria community correctional centre will be on day parole," Foster's letter says. "As the name implies, this is a form of parole which permits inmates who are nearing the end of their sentence to leave the penitentiary on a day-to-day basis, usually to work or study in the community. It is an accepted and successful program."

The letter to Pollen says it is not seeking endorsement of the plan.

"However, if you or city council do have any reservations or further questions, would you please let me know. . . ."

Asked for his views today, Pollen said introduction of this type of centre into an established neighborhood will obviously have "sociological ramifications," but it is difficult for the layman to know what those will involve.

He said one of the things he will want to know is the originating source of the inmates.

"If they were coming from one of the advanced crime areas such as Montreal or Vancouver I would question its advisability," he said.

But if the inmates were "run-of-the-mill" offenders seeking to rehabilitate themselves into society it would be difficult to find any real grounds for concern.

Foster said today almost all of the centre's residents would come from William Head, a minimum security prison being upgraded to medium security.

William Head director Gamaliel Milner said the inmates going to the Victoria centre would be those with a link to the community, either former residents or attending school here.

While the length of time an inmate might spend at the centre will vary, he estimated it might average two or three months.

Foster's letter to Pollen notes it is now a legal requirement that every inmate released from a penitentiary must accept a period of supervision.

He added today that a new policy has the National Parole Board approving all parole cases, meaning there will be a double screening of all inmates going to the Victoria centre. They will have to be considered and recommended first by the penitentiary service and then cleared by the parole board.

The two Vancouver centres have produced no problems, he said.

CONSTRUCTION MEN HURT IN FALL

Two construction workers were rushed to Victoria General Hospital early today after falling from the top of a three-storey apartment building.

Frank Pohl, 22, of 3030 Jutland, and Bruce Atkinson, 33, of 6910 Beyness, were unloading 2500 pounds of lumber which had been hoisted by crane onto some framework for a balcony at 820 Craigflower.

The framework collapsed and the lumber crashed through two other sets of studs to the ground. Both men fell with the lumber and another man, Gene Bouchard, was left hanging in the air from the crane. He swung onto the roof.

Pohl was admitted to Victoria General for observation and Atkinson was released.

Mrs. Follows Mr. In Mayor's Chair

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Greater Victoria's second lady mayor has been elected with a mandate any politician would envy.

Mrs. Ev Mountain, 211 Anson, recently defeated five male candidates for the mayoralty of Work Point army base. Almost 90 per cent of the electors went to the polls.

Heading a council of five men and three women with eight others on the "stand-by list" in case they're needed to replace councillors posted to other places, Mayor Mountain has no illusions as to how she won.

The first woman to head the armed forces base's council, she explains:

"I've just lived here so long —9½ years—they simply recognized my name more than most of the others."

With her first regular council meeting slated for July 17, Mrs. Mountain has had no trouble appointing committee chairman either:

"They just filled in all the offices. They all knew what they wanted, recreation or whatever."

Mother of three girls and a boy, Work Point's new mayor explains her main duty:

"To try and produce for the community what the community wants and to try and help people solve their porblems as they come up."

With 15½ years of on-base living to her credit—three of them in Calgary and another three in Germany—she has plenty of expertise.

When Mayor Derek Bamford was elected the first mayor of Work Point in 1971, naturally, a mayoralty chain of office was a priority.

Undoubtedly the most inexpensive mayoralty trapping in Greater Victoria, it's also the most unique.

Emblazoned on it are the cap badges of the various units to which the Work Point residents are attached.

Appended from its base is a shiny length of pipe, emblematic of another piece of local history—the Macaulay outfall which was installed the year of Work Point's incorporation.

To his surprise, Mountain was elected mayor in 1972 and he's delighted the mayoraly seat is becoming a family tradition.

Mayor Mountain has yet to meet her counterpart, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

She has one big advantage over Mrs. Elford.

Instead of raising taxes to run her operation, Mayor Mountain only has to call on willing women volunteers to cover expenses by putting on fund-raising events.

With no tax troubles, she won't have to climb political mountains to keep atop the popularity poll.

Marriage Saved Says Escaper

A man who said he escaped from William Head institution to save his marriage told the court Tuesday he had accomplished his purpose.

Brock Flett, 25, was sentenced to six months in jail for escaping lawful custody Jan. 1 by Judge William Ostler.

Flett was picked up by police at Cook and Pembroke Monday afternoon.

He had been due for release in November after being sentenced in November, 1969, to five years for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. He was paroled in July, 1971, but was sentenced to six months in May, 1972, for attempting to deal in a forged document.

Flett's six-month sentence must be served after his regular term expires.

★ ★ ★

"My being in jail had been so tough on our marriage I had to get out to save it," Flett told Ostler.

Flett told the court he had taken his wife and two-year-old son, who he had never seen before he escaped, and gone to live and work in California.

"It was a good five months," Flett said.

"I showed her I could get a job and build a family. I wanted to get my time in and get it over with and I'm confident in my head I can do it.

"We got things straightened out and I decided to come back to Victoria and turn myself in. Unfortunately I was picked up before I had a chance to do it."

★ ★ ★

Flett said his wife was pregnant again and he now had a sense of responsibility.

Ostler said Flett's attitude was a good one.

"But you must be patient and I hope you can spend you jail sentence with as much patience as you can muster. When your time is finished, you can return to your wife and family."

Flett's sentence was followed with a court appearance by his brother, John Clendon Flett, 22, of 804 Esquimalt, on a charge of armed robbery.

Flett was remanded for one week so he could consult a lawyer.

Pollen Touts Young for Mayor

Mayor Peter Pollen has suggested to Ald. Mike Young that he consider running for the mayoralty in the Nov. 17 civic election.

Pollen disclosed the suggestion at his weekly press conference this morning, telling reporters that Young has said neither yes or no but is "thinking about it."

Asked whewther he intends to seek re-election when his current two-year term expires, Pollen said he would like to see the city continue the "enlightened planning" set in train over the past two or three years, and he feels sure that would happen under the leadership of a "young, high-calibre individual" such as Young.

"But if Neanderthals were to run I might get slightly Irish and say 'no way'," he added.

Pollen said after two years as an alderman and nearly two as mayor he tends to think he needs a change, and "there are a million things I could do with my time."

During the conference, the first since his recent visit to Charlottetown, P.E.I., for the convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Pollen volunteered comment on a wide variety of topics ranging from local civic problems to the fiscal policies of the federal government.

He took pains to stress that city council's regular Tuesday afternoon "caucus" sessions "are not and nor have they ever been in camera."

Pollen said the weekly "bull session" is a useful way for him to bring aldermen up to date on the week's developments, and for council to discuss fully, without the debate limitations of full council-meetings, a wide range of subjects.

But the only matters held in camera are those concerning property transactions and personnel, he said.

These were some of Pollen's other observations:

On the CFMM conference — Although much time was frittered away on social activities, the conference did accomplish a great deal. One of the things which impressed him was Canada's wealth of "extremely astute" mayors and aldermen, often standing "head and shoulders above the representatives of some senior governments."

On reports that developer J. A. Mace is fed up with battling the city over his proposed Bay Village development and considering pulling out — "I will be delighted to contribute to a going-away present. If he is going away it will be one of the delights of my life."

9.8% PAY BOOST FOR SENIOR STAFF

An across-the-board salary increase of 9.83 per cent for senior city hall staff was recommended Tuesday by city council's committee-of-the-whole.

The increase, effective April 1, 1973, will apply to 40 department heads, deputies, professional assistants and non-union secretarial staff and will cost the city an estimated $37,000 this year.

Provision for the increase was made in the city's 1973 budget.

The recommendation will go to council's finance committee for endorsement Thursday, and will likely be ratified by council next week.

Labor Council Tie Rejected

Members of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Government Employees' Union have overwhelmingly defeated a move to affiliate with the Victoria Labor Council, it was announced today.

The branch has 2,000 members and 1,434 of them voted in the referendum.

Against affiliation with the labor council were 1,150 members, or 80.2 per cent of those voting, while 269 were in favor and 15 ballots were spoiled.

Branch president Pat Harkness said he is "very pleased" at the 71.7 per cent response in the referendum and "I have no sour grapes at the result. That's their wishes."

He said there are probably 1,150 reasons for the rejection of affiliation.

"There is a definite need to revise the historical attitude of predominantly white collar groups towards labor councils at the local level," he said.

"There's a need for the public image of labor at the local level to be improved. Organizing white collar groups now is becoming a reality."

Harkness noted that the BCGEU has been affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress for a long time and recently it affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

"May be they just felt it's enough at this time," he said.
